Foreword

Looking through a high school yearbook, one can see that there are many phases of school life presented between its covers. As the pages unfold, one by one, they reveal the lasting memories that are imprinted in the minds of the students of New Hanover High School.

How could one forget those days of sunshine—the excitement of attending the first sophomore dance, the day when class rings were distributed, or the night that the seniors donned their graduation robes. Then, maybe, he remembers the first ball game in which he, as a member of North Carolina's largest student body, could swell with pride when a touchdown was made, a ball slid through a net, or an umpire yelled, "Home run!"

But those days of shadows are also remembered—the dance he had to miss, the report card that was not very good, or the call of a unit test that cancelled a drug store date. Possibly the memory is of that special person in English 10 who didn't smile back.

So pass the sunshine and shadow of a student's life at school! So passes a school year!

Thus, the 1960 Hanoverian has decided to capitalize on these high and low spots, these bright and dark spots, this sunshine and these shadows of New Hanover High School; and it is hoped that as the years ahead roll by, the reader will still be able to relive those high school years as he looks again through these pages.

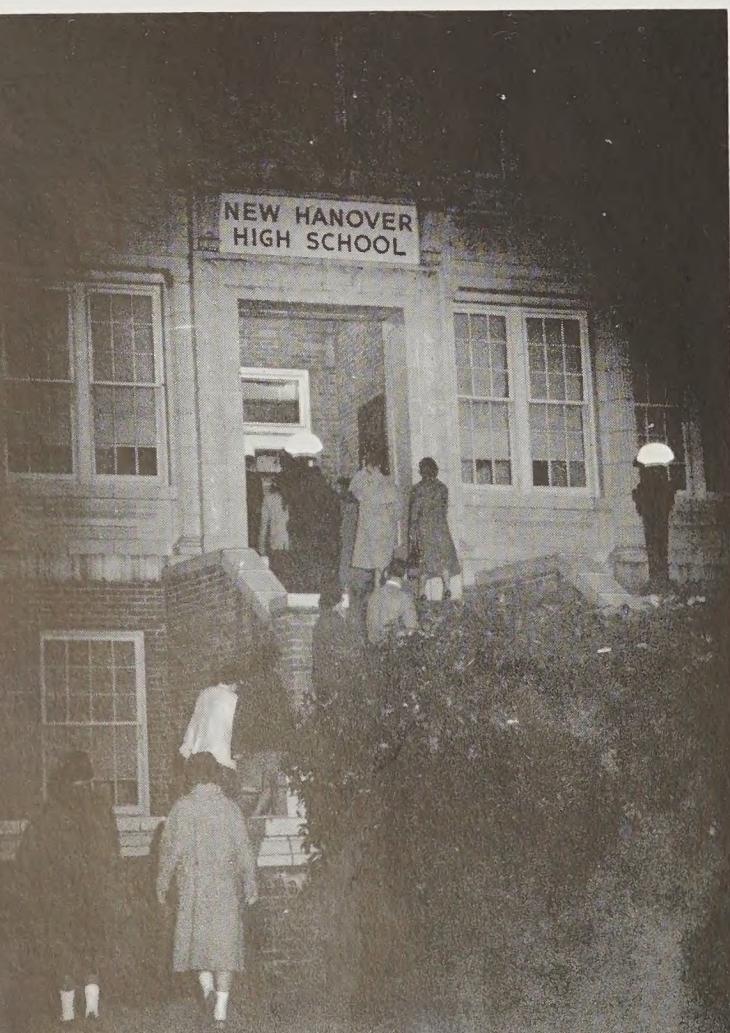

"To thee we sing our praises."

Parents, teachers, and students form the working triangle of New Hanover High School.

"The years will find us loyal . . ."

Students bring their parents to the first meeting of the 1959-60 Parent-Student-Teacher Association.

The students of New Hanover High School realize that their parents have supported and guided them throughout their high school years. In the days of shadow, parents have provided comfort; in the days of sunshine, they have shown pride. The time spent at high school has included many challenges which could not have been overcome without the inspiration and understanding that they have bestowed upon the students of NHHS. The students well remember that rainy day that called the parents outside to come to their rescue and that night that they had to ask questions for an English test instead of watching their favorite detective program. Many students may remember with regret those nights that they were kept at home to study, but they also remember the higher mark on the test the next day. The class members will always keep the memories of the first high school dances because of the time and effort that the parents spent on choosing the perfect dress, remembering corsages, getting along without the family car for the evening, and not looking at the clock when they heard the boy or girl come in a little late. When graduation time rolls around, each graduate knows that he has not attained that goal alone; he has had many helpers, among those his own parents. The Hanoverian Staff, acknowledging the constant companions and persistent leaders, dedicates this 1960 yearbook to the parents—the parents of the students of New Hanover High School.

ANESTHESIA

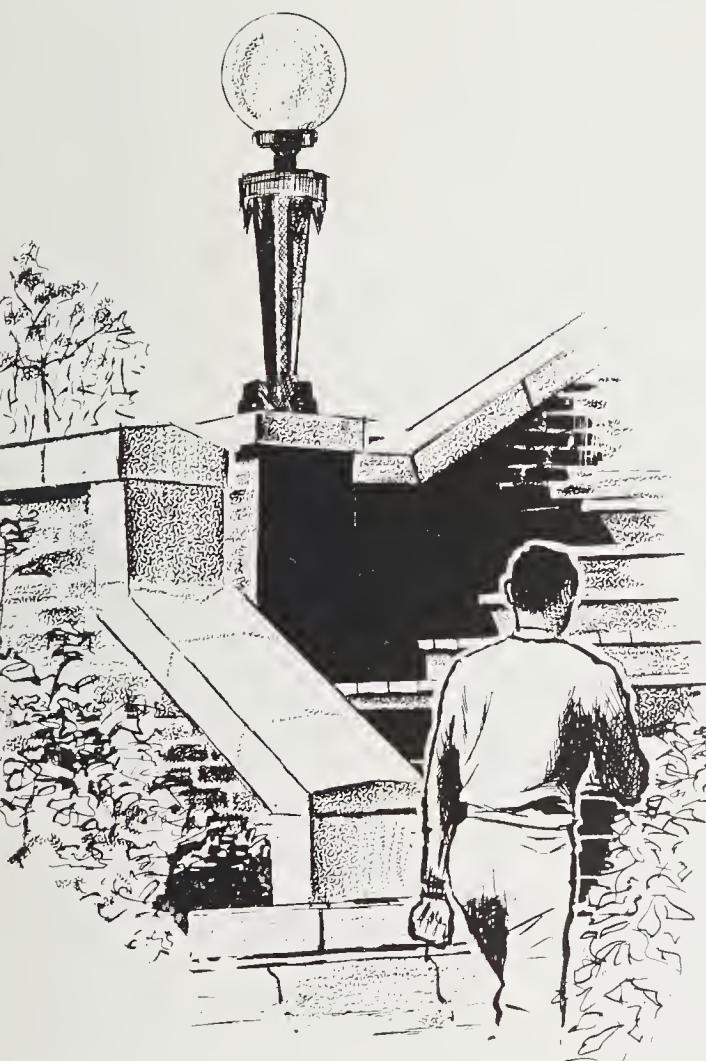

The darkness of the night has fallen
And no longer may I fool nature of her hypnotic powers with artificial lights.
Too overcome with weakness to wrestle with the entreating bliss,
I lay down today's work,
Too dreary to be concerned that tomorrow
it will be yesterday's.
When I retire to my nightly haven,
I meditate with God over the day completed
Until nature enshrouds me with her miracle of peace of mind and body.
Unfailingly, she awakens me from the overwhelming, transforming wonder
To set forth before me a new miracle
And another chance to fulfill my purpose in life.

A moment of silence prevails; a queen pauses for a moment to consider the responsibility and honor she has been given with her title. In a few moments she will greet the multitude of students who chose her; in a few moments she will echo the smiles cast her way. Soon a crown will be placed upon her head and music played for the special dance in her honor.

This queen is representative of the fun and laughter—the light moments which balance the hours of work and study. The pep rally before the big game, a moment between classes snatched to chat with a friend, the smiles of passing students, the dreaming which sometimes chases away reality: these are as much a part of school life as the books and papers one sees momentarily, casually left on the Senior Steps.

In the flitting moments of the day, there are many times when laughter elevates the serious and flavors it with a dash of enjoyment. These times will linger long in the sunshine and shadows of the memory.

In mathematics one learns that the whole equals the sum of its parts. The result can be no more.

In education the institution can be no more successful than the efforts of its administration, faculty, and students.

Shortly after 1886 the high school became a vital part of New Hanover County's educational system. Until 1896 Wilmington's secondary school was located in a little one-story schoolhouse just south of the courthouse on Third Street. Then in 1897 the first graduating exercises were held in Tileston School, and certificates were presented to three girl graduates. The 1910 and 1918 annexes were added because of rapid growth; and by 1921 the new high school at Thirteenth and Market Streets was completed and occupied.

Development since 1921 has been rapid for NHHS. The elementary school at Isaac Bear moved to Chestnut Street, and the high school expanded into that building. Then Vocational Building was occupied, and the bakery building on the south side of Market Street became the headquarters for the only secondary ROTC unit in the Carolinas. The bakery garage was walled in for a band room. In 1954 Brogden Hall and Memorial Building were first used, and the area which was Thirteenth Street between there and the main building was incorporated into the campus. The Isaac Bear Building was consequently vacated to Wilmington College. As the school buildings filled the available area, Pembroke Jones Park became more popular with the students as a recreational area. In 1959

the new Industrial Center offered new shops, laboratories, band facilities, offices, and additional classrooms.

Yet, while this physical growth provided for the increase from three graduates in 1897 to the four hundred fifty in 1959, the important growth has been in the curriculum presented to prepare these students for the life each is to live after his direct contact with the school ends.

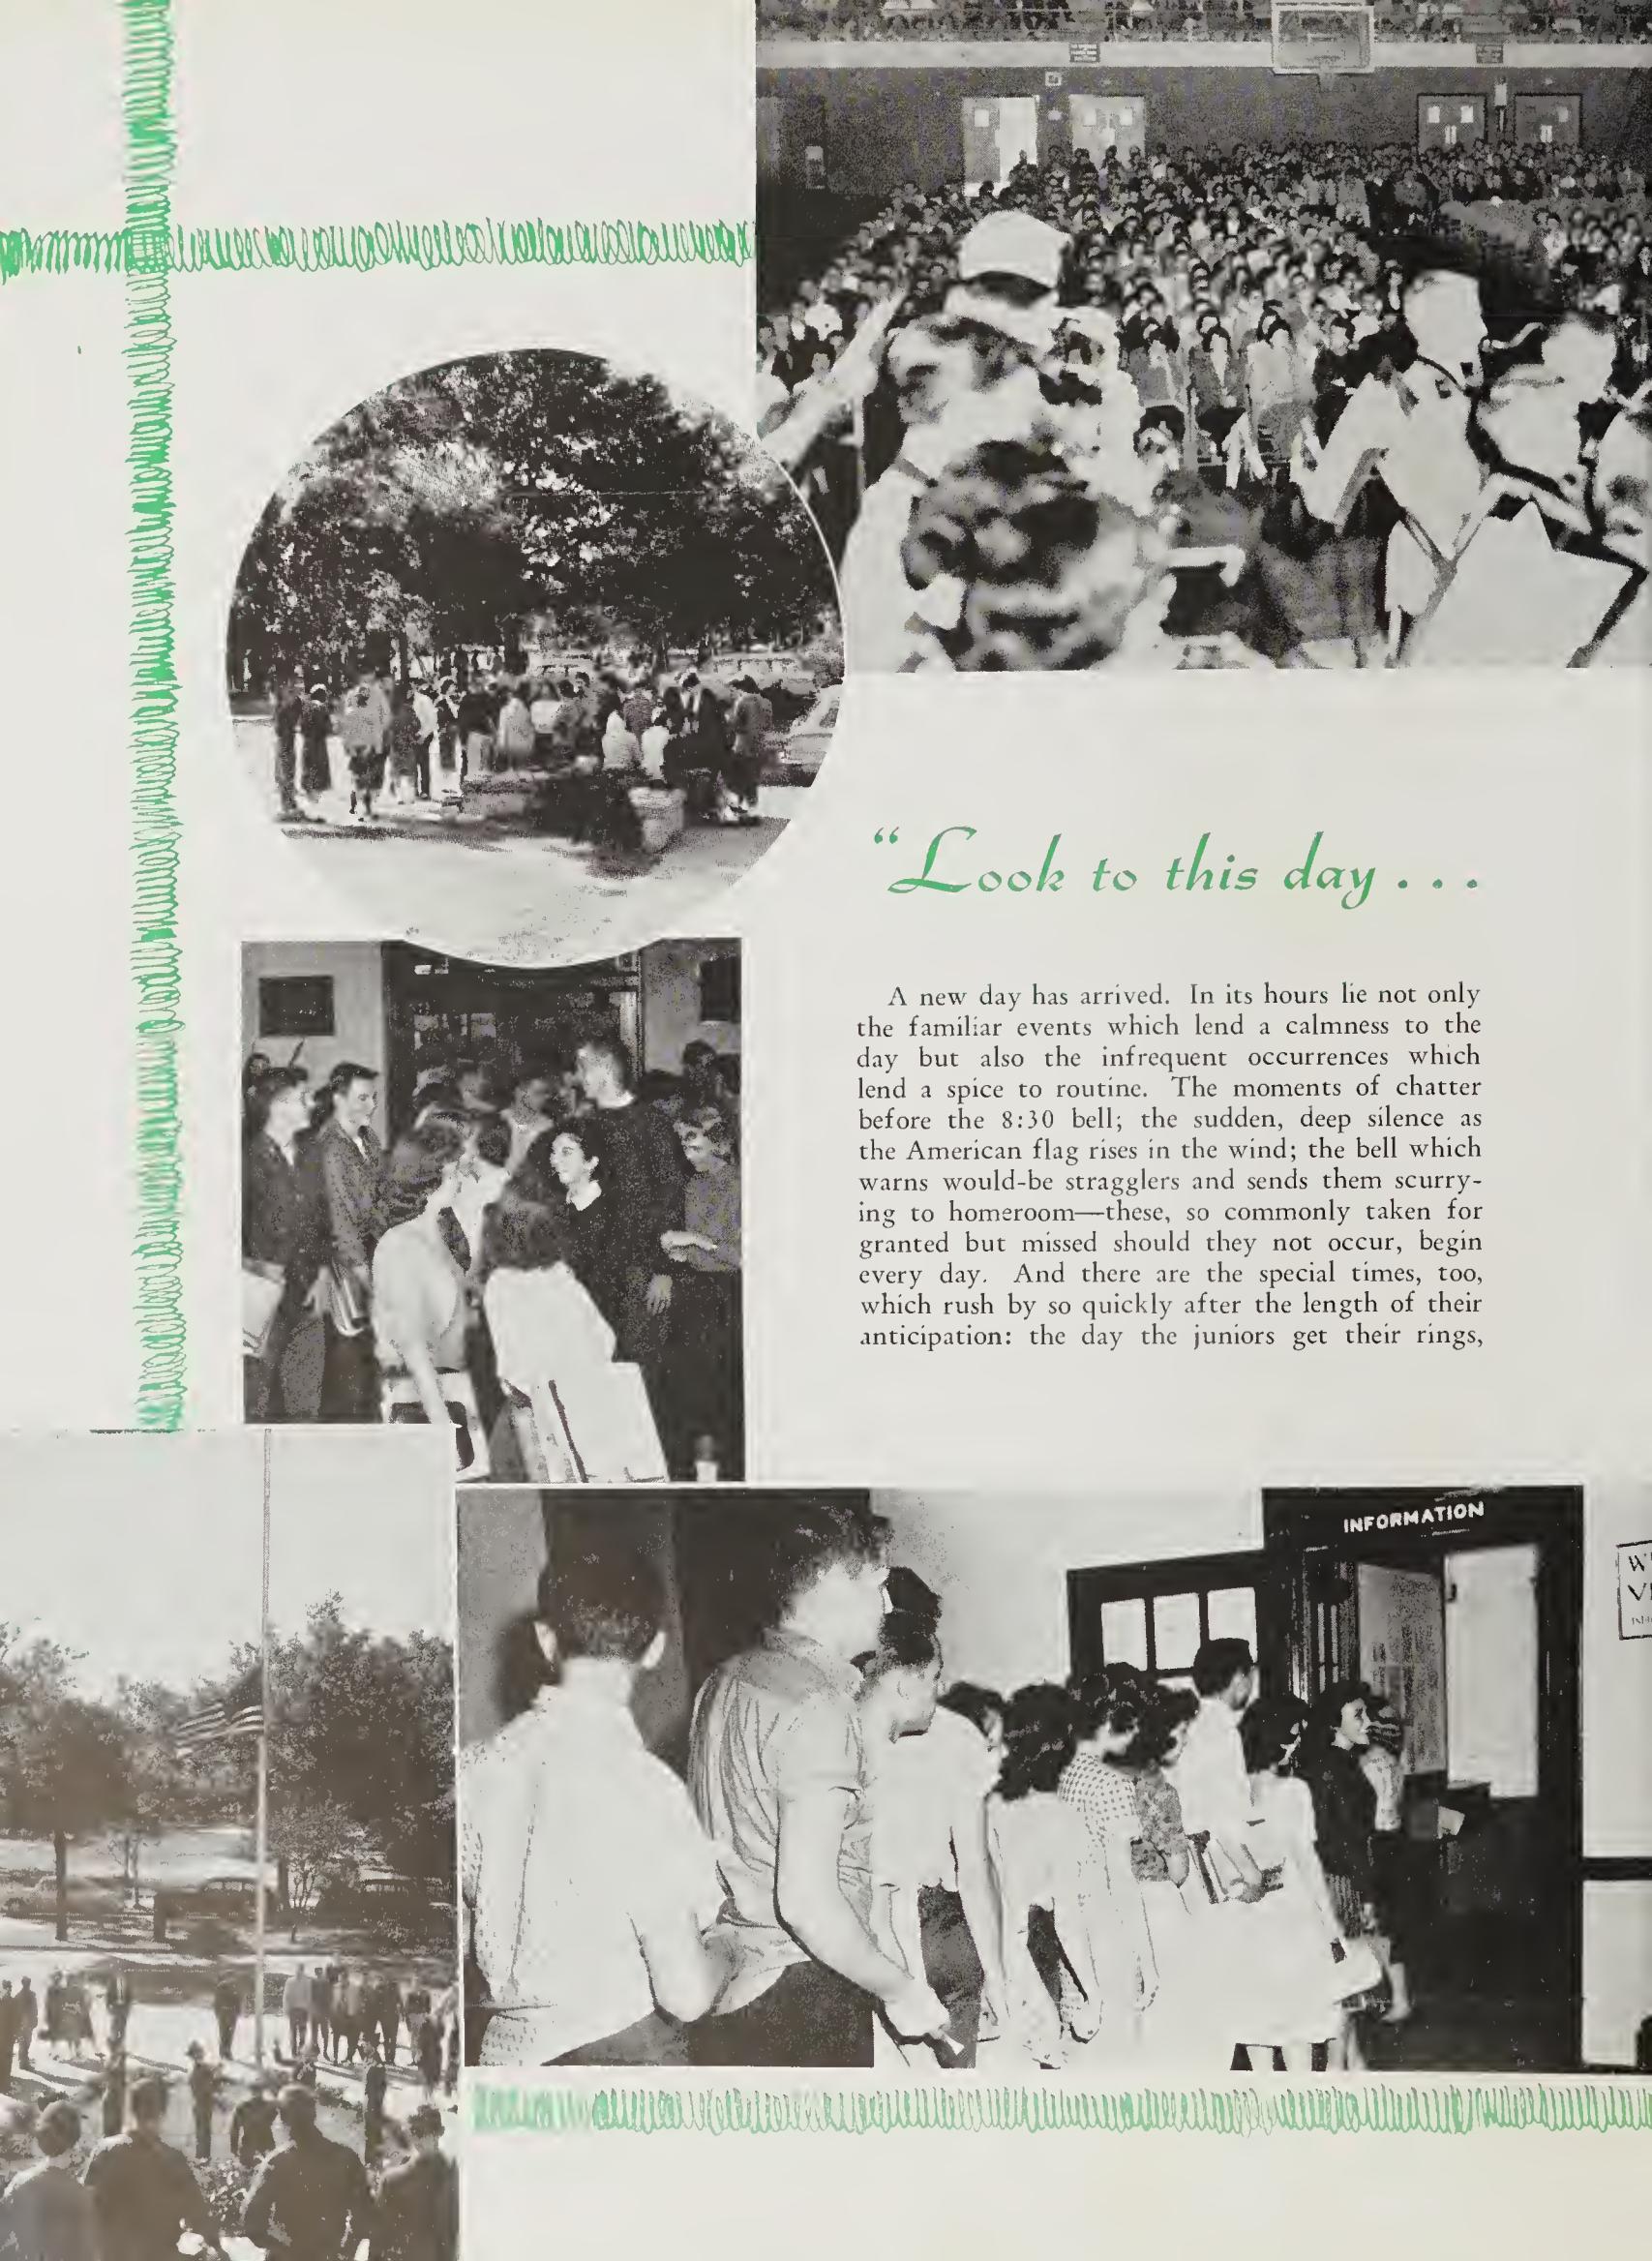

In 1959-1960 there were thirty-eight commercial classes, sixty-two English classes, thirty-eight mathematics classes, thirty-seven natural science classes, fifty social studies classes, twenty-nine trade classes, five in art, four in Bible, three in distributive education, five in drama, six in driver education, thirteen in health and physical education, twelve in home economics, twenty-one in languages, seven in library service, seven in music, and twelve in ROTC. One hundred staff members and twenty-two hundred students were mixed well with these offerings of the curriculum to make the NHHS pie.

Greater success comes with each class as the number and caliber of awards and scholarships and recognitions climb—each year soaring above the record set by the preceding class. This progress in plant, in number of teachers and students, in achievement, in curriculum, in knowledge has thrived as an outstanding example of how in education the shadows of a small beginning have given way to the sunshine of the present. A victory is being won—and the battle is one of which everyone can be very proud.

“Look to this day . . .

A new day has arrived. In its hours lie not only the familiar events which lend a calmness to the day but also the infrequent occurrences which lend a spice to routine. The moments of chatter before the 8:30 bell; the sudden, deep silence as the American flag rises in the wind; the bell which warns would-be stragglers and sends them scurrying to homeroom—these, so commonly taken for granted but missed should they not occur, begin every day. And there are the special times, too, which rush by so quickly after the length of their anticipation: the day the juniors get their rings, for it is life."

special performance in assembly, or the day the new equipment for the chem lab arrives.

These next few pages picture the student life at New Hanover High. These moments are moments of Sunshine and of Shadow. There are the ups and the downs in every day; but without the serious and doubtful moments the times of joy could not be truly appreciated. Especially in the next few pages are recorded the bright moments of the day as well the moments of seriousness and study. In this, the 1960 HANOVERIAN, are pictured the students of NHHS in their times of sunshine and shadow.

Basketball leaves no time to be wasted.

Many bright hopes have been laid aside or completely abandoned because of the improbability of their fulfillment. Many times the main reason was that of a lack of endurance or of some other shortcoming in physical fitness; an even greater drawback has been the inability of the person to get along well with others. The student with a bright, alert mind can seldom attain his greatest goal—success in life—unless he has striven to keep his body healthy and has learned to regard carefully his teammates in the game of daily living.

It is for this that the physical education department of New Hanover High School prepares the student. A good basic foundation in both sports and personality can be developed for the students both individually and collectively. Underlying the instruction of handling a baseball bat or a tennis racquet is the personal guidance in controlling the body and the mind, the coordination of hand and thought.

A student must have a strong body . . .

tory. It is a combination of these two lessons which create champions.

The games played are always challenging and are eagerly anticipated by all. A number of various exercises are employed to limber up the muscles in preparation to vigorous playing. After a few days of push ups and deep knee bends, muscles are toned up and knees stop popping at every bend. Tennis, basketball, volleyball, softball, swimming, baseball, tumbling, and a multitude of other sports provide a wide range of choice for those of varying taste.

Besides participation in sports, the girls' physical education classes begin early in the year to train for the countywide Music Festival held in May. Each year these girls provide a variety of entertaining dances ranging from folk dances of every nation to better known dances peculiar to the United States.

The various activities of the physical education classes often lead to, a development of interests amid a number of students so as to result in the formation of teams and athletic clubs over and above the regular school teams.

New Hanover High School maintains very high standards which may be attributed only to the vigor and eagerness of its students. It is the student who establishes the true spirit of the school; the little things which are so essential to an enjoyable day are provided by the student. As one goes from moment to moment of high school life, he is faced with various problems and situations which contribute to the lively spirit of this school.

In the bustle and rush of a day's activities there is always time to pause for a quiet moment of friendly conversation. Besides those usual moments of carrying well worn books to another class or the sight of a friend caught primping before she gets to that class where he sits right behind her, there are those rarer moments which seldom come. The excitement and expectation of ROTC cadets reaches a climax at the year's end when the outstanding cadet for the year is awarded the Cape Fear Sword. In this moment is reflected the quality of leadership which goes into the making of a school. Pride in New Hanover is shown when a pretty cheerleader does an impromptu dance with the team mascot at a student body pep rally. Behind all the shouted cheers and clapping is a deep-set love for and pride in NHHS. Laughter, another enlightening factor in a long day, is enjoyed when the unexpected happens: when a private conversation turns out to be not so private. It is moments like these which knit students closely together.

A swirl of chiffon, the scent of carnations surrounded by ribbon and fern, the sound of music filling the air: these are familiar things at NHHS dances. Dances, planned and organized by students, are a great source of entertainment and enjoyment. The first dance of the year, the Twirl Dance, is presented to the student body by the Sophomore class. In November, the Football Finals Dance, complete with Varsity and Cheerleaders' Sweethearts, brings the football season to a close. The ROTC Ball, looked forward to by all cadets and officers, proves a highlight of the year for the entire battalion. A beautiful May Court and Queen are presented at the May Dance.

All dances are thoroughly enjoyed; but it is the Junior-Senior Prom, climaxing high school years for seniors and promising one more full year to juniors, whose happy moments will linger longest in memory of those who must leave NHHS never to return as students.

On a sunny day or on one dimmed by rain clouds, student life at New Hanover High School busily continues. Each hour is filled with the less important events and decisions which give to the school day its own characteristics and secure for it a place in the student's memory.

The school day dawns early, and the sidewalks in front are always filled with students awaiting the buzz of the bell which will send them dashing to homeroom. A trip to the locker may prove a momentous occurrence when this is the day all of your paraphanalia chooses to occupy a place on the floor. Passing the closed doors of the auditorium, few can resist a peek to see what's going on inside.

These are the times which make this day different. Perhaps it is a time for the Wildcat distribution, or the Police Department's Teenager of the Year award, or the all-important student government elections. Or it may even be that long awaited day when the juniors excitedly receive their class rings.

Pardon me! Is my eye crushing your elbow?

But school life is not exclusively confined to those happenings which occur during the school day. As the darkness of night descends, the boys ready themselves for a twilight football game. The shadows of the evening also frame many dances and plays; the dances are planned by the student body as are the plays, such as the operetta, which produce much enjoyment for everyone.

Each day, each hour lends a spark of lightness to the seriousness of concentration and study.

uncertain future. Strengthened by long hours of preparation and study and filled with happy memories of high school days, they turn their eager young faces toward the years ahead.

These seniors are the same students who as sophomores went "up" the "down" stairs, fearfully waited for their first exams, and marvelled at the ability of upperclassmen to arrive at the right class at the right time. When final report cards came out, the sophomores proudly assumed their titles of juniors. Now was a time of anticipation: the Junior-Senior Prom, the symbolic class rings, the Junior class play. Now was a time of some serious reflections on the future and possible vocations. Then the Junior year is over, and they are finally seniors. So begins a memorable year made more precious by the intruding thought that soon these carefree days will end. The Senior class play, Superlatives, May Queen, ROTC sponsors and officers—the list of important events goes on and on. That treasured walk up the senior steps, the feeling of pride when they take their places in Brogden Hall: the memories of that last year will fill many a reminiscent evening.

Too soon, the senior year draws to a close, and final cap and gown measurements mark those last days. Finally the night arrives: the wait in line, the Baccalaureate, the diplomas; and the star shines at its brightest.

What do the five points of the star represent? Together they are a student with each point a vital part of a happy existence. Each is in its brilliance a quality to be desired and cherished.

The first must be integrity, a guidepost against the dimness of temptations that plague one in the modern world. The second symbolizes knowledge, a steady and reliable friend always ready to point the way to what is right. The third point is friendship—friendship to carry one through the darkest days; the fourth, humility, is to keep one free from conceit. And the fifth is perserverance, the ability to try and try again until success is achieved.

With the sunshine and shadows of their high school days behind them, the seniors go to establish their places in life.

“Lovely to look at . . .

When the curtain has lifted and the radiant face of this year's May Queen has come to light, it can be seen that Frances Le Neave, a striking blond, reigns as New Hanover's Queen of the May. Although this is her debut in the May Court, her charming manner and pretty countenance helped win her a place in the Valentine Court during her sophomore year. This was only the beginning of Frances's many honors. In her junior year she was selected to serve as a social marshal. Her gracious smile and friendly personality has enabled her during her senior year to win the coveted titles of Varsity Sweetheart, Battalion Sponsor of the ROTC, and Senior Superlative "Best Looking", before she was chosen May Queen by the student body. The May Court of 1960 has a beautiful and gracious sovereign.

Delightful to know.”

As the Maid of Honor of 1960 is presented, the attention focuses on a charming brunette, Rose Potter. No newcomer to the May Court, this pretty lass has graciously served in the Court during her sophomore and junior years. Rose, having served as homeroom chairman and in the student government and now working in two secretarial capacities—secretary of the FBLA and the Senior Class—does not lack for activities to keep her busy. This dark-haired lovely is well-known around school, for her ever-ready smile and winning personality have won her many friends. This Maid of Honor is well representative of New Hanover High.

When the sun begins to shine brightly and April showers have brought May flowers, students' thoughts turn to the May Dance and the May Court. During the fall of the year each class elects two attendants to represent them in the May Court. The entire student body elects the May Queen and Maid of Honor. The Queen of the May, Frances Le Neave, reigns over six lovely class attendants this year. Among those girls, all of whom well represent the student body of NHHS, are the Sophomore attendants, Gail Barefoot and Janet Merritt. Both these lovely brunettes serve as members of the House of Representatives.

Curriculum

ADMINISTRATION AND FACULTY

Soon the now silent classroom will echo with the words of the teacher and the voices of students as the two work diligently together to give and to acquire knowledge. But now the room reposes; and in the quiet solitude and stillness, a teacher regards with a sense of pride it and her pupils, her marks of accomplishment.

Each day at New Hanover the faculty and administration stand ready to aid students and to guide their ways down the right paths to the future. With patience as their brightest point, the teachers willingly give their valuable time to help a student with his problems; teachers know that a student cannot do his best work unless the personal pressures of his life are somewhat removed. The search for learning will have its difficult times; but with student-teacher relationship on such a basis, the way will be a good one.

The administration has the same understanding and capabilities. The respective offices work toward a firmer and stronger foundation on which to build the character of the student and the scholastic standing of the school.

Within the sunshine and shadows of the classroom, the student gains a greater respect for his friends and teachers and greater confidence in himself and his abilities.

Mr. Dale K. Spencer, Principal, looks to the future of New Hanover High School.

The administration is the mainspring in the delicate workings of any school. Without precision in this vital part, the rest of the parts cannot function accurately; and the school does not operate smoothly. The competent administration of New Hanover High School works to make this, the largest high school in North Carolina, also the best. Years of experience influence the many decisions which Mr. Spencer, principal, must make daily. Mr. Gurganus, assistant principal, also has much to do in a day's time; but he is never too busy to advise any student who approaches him with a problem.

The offices of both Mr. Capps, Dean of Boys, and Mrs. Lane, Dean of Girls, are always crowded with students seeking an admission slip or an excuse blank for that trip to the dentist or that out-of-town game.

The Registrar, Miss Montgomery, is always busy filling out records and supplying needed information to both faculty and students. Mr. McCall, Director of Guidance, offers aid to those students planning on a college education, applying for scholarships, or taking aptitude tests to guide them in selecting a future vocation.

New Hanover's students may well be proud of this administration which constantly, smilingly, works for them throughout their high school years.

The English courses—requisites at New Hanover—provide an excellent literary background for each of its students.

The sophomore course in English is one which covers a wide selection of fictional and non-fictional topics and includes a great variety of authors of many nationalities. The basic essentials of poetry are also studied; and soon each sophomore is lost in a world of metaphors, similes, onomatopoeia, repetition and rhyme scheme. Toward the end of the year the days of old Rome and Shakespeare are brought to life by the introduction of Shakespearian plays and the Elizabethan age. In the junior year, the literary course is concerned with stressing American authors and the American way of life. The men who have left for the American people the precious heritage of beauty, entertainment, and inspiration in the form of essays, poems, and stories. Within the course of a year's learning, the students become conscious of the inheritance bequeathed them in the wealth of American literature; they come to know America and her people. In the senior year come the first struggles with English: Beowulf, the seemingly difficult words of Chaucer's old English, and finally the eternal works of William Shakespeare. No year of English 12 would be complete without a research theme. For many weeks the libraries and study halls are filled with seniors trying to find specific information for their papers.

While literature occupies an important place in New Hanover English courses, the study of the essentials of grammar are also emphasized. A synopsis of a verb, the numerous kinds of pronouns, the correct way to use each verbal—these and many other things must a student know and understand. To utilize the long hours of drill and practice and to judge the students ability to comprehend and then transpose into use the essentials taught, book reports, themes, essays, and stories are required.

In these English classes are the journalists of tomorrow. Within the writings and works which they will hand down to future generations, may well lie the sunshine and shadows of the present.

The students of today . . .

Buster Hickman and Buster Carr assume positions of sheriff and deputy sheriff for the duration of Government Day.

Time and history have marched hand in hand down through the ages. With great rapidity, event piles upon event to present a confusing array of fresh-made history. Through social studies students are able to keep up with the never ending changes that take place in this modern world. It is the responsibility of the social studies department to put before the students in an interesting manner these continual changes. The students must also attain a better knowledge of past empires as well as the present governmental systems of the United States and other world nations.

As a student delves back into the pages of history, he studies the major civilizations and nations which once existed, the reasons for their rise and fall, and their contributions to present civilization. The governments of these nations are contrasted to those of today. United States history and United States government are requirements of every New Hanover High School graduate. In these courses the principles and ideals of American government are clearly stated so that young citizens of today need not stutter when they must define or defend the American way of life. Here the students begin to realize the values of life in a democracy.

Each spring, government students step into the administrative offices of the city and the county as local Government Day is observed. Students from the government classes campaign for various offices from mayor to jailer. These junior officials are elected by the government classes on a secret ballot. These students who are chosen work along with the city and county officials as the day progresses and are honored at a special banquet.

Students are given opportunity for recognition in writing and delivering a five minute speech for the "Voice of Democracy." The speeches are recorded and judged on content and delivery. The local winner is sent to the State contest; the State winner proceeds to the national contest. In this contest the student has a chance to express his views of the advantages of a democracy.

America's political future may well contain many of these students who have had a small taste of making history. Certainly the days to come may be brighter with the ideas of a new generation. Perhaps these students may one day have a hand in dispelling the threat of oppression which hangs, a fearful shadow, over the minds of free men.

In a modern world such as ours, the study of mathematics is an invaluable aid. With emphasis so placed on the possibilities of this field, few could survive and succeed in the business world without a fundamental or advance course in mathematics. Yet, few realize the numerous ways a study of this subject is utilized each day. There are numerous instances where one would have occasion to depend upon a knowledge of math to guide the way; for mathematics, a true science, is put to practical use every day by people in widely varying occupations. Not only are the principals of math used in the homes, in business, and in industry, but the reasoning and concentrating abilities which are developed by the study of math prove invaluable in solving the problems which frequent the roads of life. An understanding of many things comes through reasoning and achievement usually follows the light of understanding.

New Hanover High School makes available to its students the basic sources of math, the business courses of math, and the higher planes of math. Basic math courses provide a foundation for later mathematical study. Their purpose is also the reviewing of knowledge and skills while special emphasis is placed on practical applications. Business arithmetic applies the principals of arithmetic to the solutions of problems which might arise in the business world. The course places emphasis on topics vocational in nature and is offered to commercial study. To the student taking shop comes the opportunity to take shop math which provides a background in basic arithmetic. Problems of the machinist, carpenter, brickmason, plumber, and electrician are often stressed.

Algebra I, II, and Advanced Algebra are available for those students planning to enter some phase of mathematical or scientific study. These take the student from the comparative simplicity of signed numbers into the more complicated logarithmic functions. Trigonometry, another of the higher maths, is a course which is also taken preparatory to college entrance. Plane geometry and solid geometry familiarize the student with plane and solid figures. College math, a course designed for those students who plan to enter the engineering field is offered if there is sufficient demand.

Class participation in these courses of mathematics stimulates reasoning and thinking powers in students and increases their sense of logic. In the way, regardless of whether the student continues study in the fields of either mathematics or sciences, the math courses prove invaluable. Projects of the student's own devising spark interest in the course and provide a practical method of illustrating theories and laws which might otherwise be a trifle vague.

Mathematics has a great deal to offer one who has an interest in and an ability for it. A career in mathematics provides good co-workers, opportunity for advancement, and high salary. There is much satisfaction in being able to solve a problem, in having the bright ray of understanding penetrate the cloud of uncertainty. In such a solution lies the sunshine of life.

In biology the student begins to get an idea of the motivating forces behind life—from the euglena, lowest form of all life, to the complex and intricate human structure. Besides learning about plants and animals, biology students study the human body and the function of its organs. Advanced biology is offered to those students who wish to further their knowledge in this field. During this course a study of diseases and scientific re-

The chemistry lab becomes the second home of every chemistry student. In studying the laws and theories set up over the years of research and revision, the student begins to know and to understand the infinite particles and the forces which compose our world and daily affect its existence. Performing experiments taken from the laboratory manual helps a student to learn more fully the materials which compose different substances. This year an advanced course equivalent to a second year of chemistry has been offered to those students who excelled in their first year of chemistry. This course is designed for those students who are interested in a scientific career or who want to better prepare themselves for college. challenge for the seeking mind. The study of heat and light presents problems to the physics students almost daily. Students who are planning a career in any branch of engineering or those planning to go to college should take physics. The knowledge of physical laws enables a student to solve problems outside the physics laboratory in fields other than science.

Senior science is offered to those seniors who wish to better understand the world about them but are not planning to attend college.

It is through the study of a science that one is able to think for himself in an orderly fashion. One soon becomes aware of the use of scientific knowledge in everyday life. It is when one begins Trained industrialists . . .

As one prepares to enter his chosen field, he must be familiar with the various phases of and the tools needed for his vocation. Efficiency and accuracy, vital in industrial occupations, come only with hours of practice and training. There are many fields of industrial work available today; and although each differs considerably in its aspects of work and training, there is one qualification common to all: mind and hand must coordinate.

Mechanical drawing presents to the student units from lettering to blueprinting. For him who prefers to use both tools and the ideas set on paper, carpentry provides a course in hand tooling, machine tooling, and wood finishing. Also, one must learn to work from drawings, to read blueprints, to know construction methods, and to draft his ideas. Time is divided between the shop and classroom. In carpentry II students take part in actual building framing and finishing operations. General metals, like carpentry, requires both hand and head work. Through designing and constructing his own projects, one gains a basis for a metalworking career.

Machine shop courses are designed for the student entering mechanized industry. This course gives practice in the necessary basic skills, technical information, and work relations information needed by any good machinist. Auto mechanics familiarizes its student with combustion engines, and engine theory, overhaul, ignition, lubrication, and hydraulics. Likewise, in aeronautics is provided a knowledge of the aircraft and jet engines, aerodynamics, navigation, and meteorology.

Shop I, Auto Mechanics, are being shown mechanical drawings from the classes of Col. A. D. Gorham, Mechanical Drawing I, II.

Leaving the new industrial building are: Mr. Justin Kornegay, Carpentry I, II; Mr. Kenneth Wooten, General Aeronautics; Mr. Ralph Bordeaux, Auto Mechanics; Mr. Henry White, Shop Mathematics, Basic Electricity; and Mr. George West, Director of Trade and Industrial Education.

The basics of electricity are explained and demonstrated in such units as house wiring and motors and generators. This course covers the fundamentals of D.C. and A.C. circuits. Experiments are performed illustrating the electrical effects studied. This course is a sound background for anyone planning to enter the electrical field. Shop math classes are designed to aid in the solution of problems common to manual occupations. As well as applying the mathematical principles involved, the student is given a background of the various tools employed in industry.

From the shop classes arise the builders of tomorrow: the architects and constructionists, the designers, the mechanics, the electricians, the weathermen of the future. These are the men who will keep the wheels of industry turning, who will make the years to come bright with the fruit of their minds and their hands.

Each year, many students go forth into the modern business world; these young people are ready to ply their way with a knowledge of the many problems which may arise before them. Those students who are best prepared are among those who have taken commercial courses in high school.

of business problems. General business furnishes a basic background for further study of business, along with concepts of business which will contribute to the solution of personal business problems and the understanding of economic society.

Advancing from the elementary principles of these courses to the more complicated phases of office and secretarial work, the commercial students are prepared to step from high school into a paying job. Armed with a knowledge of these, a student is ready to assume his role as a responsible person in the bustle of the modern era.

To turn their training into practical accomplishment, the students often serve as secretaries to the teachers. Through this service valuable experience is gained.

The seniors who take office practice are given credit toward their graduation while actually working with various firms during the day. Thus these students are able to finish their high school education and at the same time prepare themselves for a place in the business world.

classes learn folk dances which they present annually at the New Hanover County Music Festival. Although there are several choral groups and bands from all schools in the New Hanover County system, this is the only group which dances in this program.

Pupils are also encouraged to participate in activities which will provide an opportunity for the development of self-control, self-confidence, and self-respect. Emphasis is placed on getting along with others and living up to the rules of the game.

Ideals of sportsmanship and fair play are stressed throughout the year. Students learn to win, as well as to lose, gracefully and to enjoy the game for pleasure, not the score, which results.

Music has many moods, ranging from the somber chords of the more serious songs to the gay songs which fill the day with sunshine. For those whose talents lie in either vocal or instrumental music, New Hanover offers the glee club, mixed chorus, Hanover Singers, ROTC Band, and the New Hanover High School Band. The many long hours of practicing precision drills and tricky choruses are well worth the smiles and congratulations offered after the performance has gone off smoothly and entertainingly.

Languages unify the world.

Languages bridge the gap between early and modern times; they form the basis for practically all history up to this time.

In Latin, a student may view Caesar as he crosses the Rubicon or conquers the Gauls. French familiarizes the student with French menus or acquaints him with the genius of Napoleon as the general invades Germany and Russia. In Spanish, however, one looks with wonder at the artistry of Velazquez, Ribera, and Picasso or learns of the terrible tortures which were a part of Aztec culture, the forerunner of present South American civilization.

The shadows of history began to disappear as brilliant speck of the light of languages pierces the darkness of misunderstanding; and as the old world clasps hands with the new, one realizes that this would have been impossible without a knowledge of languages.

Home Economics trains future homemakers.

The course in home economics is designed to further the homemaking abilities of girls who plan to choose housekeeping as their career. Food preparation and sewing give experience for those countless, endless tasks which fill the homemaker's day. A cheerful personality comes from one's being neat and well groomed, and so a course which expects to produce capable future wives and mothers cannot overlook those helpful grooming tips.

The course in home economics is planned for meeting the everyday needs of teen-age girls. Emphasis is placed on personal and social development, child care from the angle of the baby-sitter, and other subjects that will help them in later life.

Home economics offers lessons which in due time will prove themselves indeed worthwhile.

There are new worlds in books.

When the shadows of uncertainty or boredom fall, one can dispel doubt and gain knowledge by seeking information and enjoyment from books. In the library can always be found a sophomore rushing to secure a book for his book report due the next day, a junior seeking information on a future vocation, or a senior hurriedly checking out books on which to base his research theme.

The students who have elected library service are extremely helpful; their assistance is greatly appreciated when professional help is needed.

The library is a necessary and important part of the school; within the pages of the books which crowd its shelves lie new and exciting worlds of enjoyment.

Diversified occupations offers to students at NHHS the opportunity to gain invaluable experience in vocational training by actually working in an industrial establishment at the job of their own choice. Students further their knowledge in the fields covered in their jobs by studying in school information directly related to his job. The time spent working each week averages about twenty hours. School credit is given for the time spent, and a small salary is paid by the employer. Students participating in the DO course receive their diplomas and full credit at graduation.

Dramatics brings enjoyment to all.

The dramatics students of New Hanover High School learn much of the theatrical world both on stage and behind the scenes, for this course offers many opportunities to students in the fields of acting and directing. The dramatics course aims to help the students in such a way that they will be able to take their places as actors in the theatre of the world confidently. For in the hands of the actors is the ability to assume the shadowy cloak of tragedy or don the bright garb of the clown, each with equal ease. Before the curtain rises, the deft hands of those behind the scenes gather the props, paint the sets, and set up the lighting effects. With a last minute straightening of costume and a last touch of make-up, the first act opens; the hours of work and rehearsal have reached their culminating moment.

The Good Book teaches values in life.

Studying the Bible helps clear up some of the shadows of doubt concerning the different religions of the world and make the students more aware of the place the Bible and its teachings occupy in daily life. The Bible course offers a study of the Old Testament, the life of Christ as found in the four Gospels, the history of the Hebrew Kingdom, and the Acts of the Apostles and the writings of Paul. The Bible students also prepare a bulletin board many times a year. Each Tuesday morning they present a devotional over the PA system for the enjoyment of the whole student body.

Activities

All eyes are focused on the big stepping majorette who performs one of the practice routines with the ease of a seasoned performer. The gracefulness and ease is a result of the long, hard hours of practice spent in perfecting especially devised routines.

Yet the majorettes are not the only group which works for enjoyment and the betterment of the school. There is room for fun in any subject from dramatics and art to politics and history, languages to science, creative writing to music. There are also the organizations for those students planning to enter business occupations. On a par with the majorettes are the cheerleaders, who inspire many team victories for NHHS. And not to be omitted from the list of important activities are the publishing of the WILDCAT and the HANOVERIAN and the smooth running of the student government of New Hanover High School.

These activities lend sparkle which makes every passing day different from the one before; they give a note of the unusual to add to the enchantment of youth and to the unexpected in the sunshine and shadows of school life.

Vice-President of the Student Body, Monk Askew, presides over the House of Representatives.

Secretary of the Student Body, Lynda Sue Peterson, keeps records of each meeting.

Democracy reigns supreme at NHHS.

The main purpose of New Hanover High School's Student Government is to give the student a free hand in the activities and accomplishments of the school. It is also established to foster a true democratic attitude toward the school and its activities, to promote closer student-faculty co-operation, and to create a more effective plan of student government.

The Student Body President performs his many duties of presiding over the Executive Council, appointing cabinet members, enforcing Student Congress laws, and carrying out other essential functions. Terry Ronner presided until the time of his resignation in November, 1959. Vice-President Monk Askew is responsible for presiding over the House of Representatives and providing devotions for each cabinet meeting. Lynda Sue Peterson is the able Secretary of the Student Body who keeps accurate minutes of every meeting and is in charge of each devotion at assembly programs.

The Student Congress has many divisions. It consists of the Executive Cabinet, the Senate, the House of Representatives, the Judges, the Judicial Marshals, and the Social Marshals.

These various councils and committees are placed under two main branches, which are the legislative branch and the judicial branch. The legislative branch is formed by the House of Representatives, consisting of one representative from each home-room; the Senators, elected by each of the three classes by secret ballot; and the Executive Cabinet. The judicial branch is a combination of the Judges and the Judicial Marshals and has the job of enforcing the laws and rules passed by the Student Congress, for the students' welfare throughout the buildings and the campus.

The Cabinet helps plan activities;

Seated in front: Terry Ronner, presiding; Lynda Sue Peterson.

Seated: Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. Booth, Peggy Anne Harriss, Monk Askew, Johnny Hobbs, Ronnie Staton, Jimmy Robbins, James Cotton, Tim Chappell, Elliot Free, Rivers Lawther, Lee Smith, Pat Taylor, Emily Moore, Gloria Jean Collins.

Acting as an advisory staff for the Student Congress is the duty of the Executive Cabinet. This group meets every week to discuss the acts or bills submitted for approval at Student Congress meetings. The committee is headed by the President of the Student Body, as well as the Vice-President and the Secretary. Various other members of the Cabinet include the Chief Judicial Marshal, the Secretary of Club Activities, and the President of the Senate. The Cabinet makes two progress reports each year concerning Student Congress.

Mrs. Ethel Booth and Mrs. Xylda Stanley act as advisors at the committee meetings, and their experienced guidance helps this committee to advise action that is for the benefit of the whole student body and all concerned.

Standing: Barbara Singletary, Marty Allegood, Beverly Bailey, Martha Small, Pat Beasley, Cole Porter, Mrs. Booth, Nancy Bradshaw, Janet Price, Patsy Hurst.

The Senate organization is one of the two main divisions of the legislative branch of the Student Government at New Hanover High School. Its members consist of six persons from each of the three classes and also the sophomore, junior, and senior class Presidents.

Six officers elected at the first meeting are in charge of the activities carried on by the Senate. The President of the Senate presides at all meetings and, if necessary, calls special sessions. The President Pro Tempore takes charge of the President's duties in case of his absence. The Secretary is appointed to keep a record of all proceedings at the meetings. Other officers are the Chaplain, the Parliamentarian, and the Sergeant-at-Arms.

There are various committees organized in the Senate, and each senator must serve on at least one committee. These committees, such as the Welfare Committee, the Social Activities Committee, the Student Union Committee, and the Hospitality Committee, all work to help improve the school's conditions, activities, and relations.

The Senate is given certain powers by which it may carry out its position in the Student Government. Because it has the authority to formulate bills for the general welfare of the student body, to organize finance bills, to impeach any member undeserving of his office in the Congress or Judiciary Department, and to approve the Judicial Marshals, the Senate holds a high rank in carrying out the legislative tasks at New Hanover High School.

Seated: Carol Booth, James Cotton, Butch Lennon, Marty Allegood.

Standing: Mrs. Booth, Bobbie Green.

the House is an agent of the people.

The House of Representatives is made up of students who are elected to represent their home-rooms. Also members of the House are the Vice-President of the Student Body and the Vice-President of the senior, junior, and sophomore classes.

At their meetings, held twice a month, the members of the House organize and discuss new bills dealing with the welfare of the student body with the exception of those pertaining to finance.

Officers of the House are elected by a simple majority vote. The election of officers takes place at the first meeting, and they are installed during the next meeting. The House is presided over by the Vice-President of the Student Body, who has no vote except in the case of a tie. He may call special sessions of the House if necessary. Others, such as the President Pro Tempore, the Clerk, the Chaplain, the Parliamentarian, and the Sergeant-at-Arms, are also included in the official body.

One branch of the Judicial Department of the Student Government is the Student Court, consisting of three seniors, two juniors, and one sophomore. These Judges are elected shortly after the opening of school during a joint session of the House of Representatives and the Senate.

The Judges have the power to try all violators of the school's laws who are reported by the Judicial Marshals for breaking school regulations between classes or at lunch. The Judges may also try members of the Student Congress and impeach members of the Senate.

The Court elects from its senior members a Chief Justice, who acts as chairman when the Court is in session. The Chief Justice has no voting power except in case of a tie.

Assistant Chief Justice, Jo Ellen Grubbs, presides over the Court when the Chief Justice, Ronnie Staton, is absent.

As a case begins, the prosecuting attorney reads the offense, after which the defendant and the marshal present their respective sides of the case. After the hearing, the Judges retire from the room to reach their verdict. A simple majority vote of the Court decides whether or not a defendant is guilty. When the Judges return, the Court Clerk gives the decision to the Chief Justice, who passes it on to the defendant.

The Judicial Marshals are a very essential group at New Hanover High School. They enforce the rules and laws of the student body and issue to any offenders a ticket requiring the receiver's presence at the next session of Student Court.

The Chief Marshal, Jimmy Robbins, acts as prosecuting attorney when Student Court is in session. If defendants are found guilty, they are sentenced to eighth or ninth periods to be served before the next court convenes.

The marshals are very useful in helping the confused sophomores find their way around in the first days of school.

Marshals are picked from volunteers by the Judiciary Committee of the House and Senate and by the Chief Marshal, Jimmy Robbins, and the Assistant Chief Marshal, James Hodges.

The advisor for the group is Miss Lena Taylor.

They add grace and dignity to social events.

The hosts and hostesses of the many activities throughout the year at New Hanover High School are the Social Marshals. The first day of school they welcome the sophomores and show them around their new school. Later the sophomores visit the very popular student union where the marshals serve them refreshments. On the following Wednesday, a chapel program is presented for the sophomores to acquaint them with the school's rules. At the first Parent-Student-Teacher meeting, all the parents are grateful to be directed to the classrooms by this capable group.

During a student's three years at New Hanover High School, he meets the Social Marshals many times. The friendly and helpful marshals are found collecting tickets, distributing programs, and ushering at school plays, the operetta, and concerts.

At Christmastime they share with everyone their Christmas spirit when they gaily decorate a Christmas tree in the main lobby. They also decorate a tree set up in the student union, with help from the Secretary of the Student Union.

It seems altogether fitting that these hosts and hostesses should bring to a close the year as well as introduce it, and they do so by sponsoring the May Dance. The May Queen and her court are selected by the student body, and this makes it a very special event of the year. The dance marks the end of the year's duties for the Social Marshals until the House of Representatives and the Senate elect new Social Marshals next fall.

The homeroom chairmen have the responsible role of keeping homeroom functions running smoothly. Often they give up a homeroom period to do various jobs for their classmates and their teacher. The chairmen provide a morning devotion at the beginning of homeroom period each day.

When election time comes around, the homeroom chairman explains what the election is for and answers any questions concerning it. Then he passes out the ballots and collects the votes for elections during the year, such as Student Congress, House of Representatives, Senate, and May Queen and Court.

The homeroom chairmen sell copies of the Wildcat and collect contributions for charities sponsored by the school. Among these charities are the Thanksgiving Welfare Offering, a Christmas collection of assorted items for the needy families of Wilmington, and the Junior Red Cross

The National Honor Society . . .

The National Honor Society upholds the finest quality of scholarship, character, leadership, and service. This makes it the most highly respected organization at New Hanover High School. The scholastic requirement is that a junior must rank in the upper three per cent of his class, and a senior must rank in the upper six per cent of his class. Activity points are used to determine leadership and service. After these requirements are passed, the character of the student is considered by the National Honor Society members and a survey of the faculty. Then approval of the faculty committee is the final step toward membership.

The induction ceremony takes place in the fall for seniors and the following spring for juniors. As the tapping of the new Honor Society members begins, all students creep closer to the edge of their seats, anxiously waiting for the next student to be called. The excitement is very tense as the new members' names are kept secret until the last second.

The Honor Society sponsors an Honor Roll Tea for all honor roll students at the end of first semester, and a Faculty Day Tea is held at the end of the second semester for the enjoyment of the teachers. The club holds its meetings in the form of supper meetings, and this adds to the list of projects for the year.

The helpful advisors of this club are Mrs. Dell Borneman and Miss Maie Sanders.

In addition to these devotions given every Tuesday morning, the Bible Club also sponsors daily morning devotions at Trinity Church for all NHHHS students and faculty. These devotions are led by students and guest speakers and help the students to start each morning in the right way.

The Bible Club of New Hanover High School, under the guidance of Miss Ruth Spence, carries out many worthwhile projects during the year. The members lead morning devotions which are helpful to high school students. The group seeks to develop Christian leadership through interesting programs and service activities such as gifts of food, clothing, and toys to needy families.

The Handbook aids with scholastic data;

The Orange and Black Handbook is published by the Student Congress each year, and on the first day of school each student receives a handbook. Found in the handbook are the school's rules and regulations, the constitution adopted by the student body, the school calendar, Student Congress officers, a faculty directory, information on school organizations, and many other things of interest to the student. In a school as important and large as New Hanover High School, it is easily seen how the Orange and Black Handbook is indispensable to the student body.

The committee, which has as its chairman Ronnie Southerland, has done excellent work in putting out the 1959-60 handbook. Each person on the committee is assigned certain groups and organizations of the school, and it is the duty of that person to check with the teachers in charge of the respective groups and receive any changes in membership requirements, projects, awards given, and other important matters. This information is then submitted to the Assistant Principal, Mr.

the Directory helps locate students.

One of the most important projects of the Student Congress is the annual publication of the New Hanover High School Telephone Directory. The directory contains the name, address, homeroom number, and telephone number of each teacher and student. The students on the committee spend much time working to make the directory as effective and accurate as possible. Mrs. Irene Turner, faculty advisor of the committee, offers advice, help, and considerable time to those who work on the committee.

After the committee is announced, the typists begin immediately to gather the information needed. They consult the office files for names, classes, and homeroom numbers. They work continuously until the material is finished, so that the students may get their directories as soon as possible. The combined efforts of the proofreaders, who correct any errors that might have been made, and the advertising staff, who sell ads and subscriptions, help to make this publication possible.

The co-chairmen for the directory are Judy Butler and Becky Daily, who are responsible for seeing that all the work is carried out.

Science Club explores wonders of the world.

The Science Club, under the advisement of Miss Lena Taylor and Mrs. Mildred Williams, has acquired a diligence and enthusiasm which have made this an educational and purposeful group desiring to learn more of unknown areas of scientific phenomena. The class projects during the year in-

"In order to form a more perfect union . . ."

The Government Club, under the supervision of Miss Rebecca Russ, has many interesting programs during the year. The club sponsors a dinner meeting, panel discussions, and outside speakers. The officers, who are Wayne Williams, President; Frances Best, Vice-President; Genie Goodman, Secretary; Doris Hardison, Treasurer; Norwood Clark, Sergeant-At-Arms; Rose Potter, Program Chairman; Janis Wahl, Parliamentarian; and Sarah Hunnicutt, Reporter; strive to stimulate more interest in government among the students.

The members of the Government Club try to obtain a clearer knowledge and understanding of a democratic government. During their biggest project, which is known as Student Government

Day, they have an opportunity to take over and run the local government in Wilmington for one day. Students are elected by their classmates to city and county offices, such as Mayor, City Councilmen, Sheriff, City Engineer, Register of Deeds, and many others. Through Student Government Day, the members of this club have a chance to see how a democratic government is run and how important each job is, no matter how small and insignificant.

The members also participate in the "I Speak for Democracy" contest, which is sponsored by the local Junior Chamber of Commerce. The club feels that this project is most worthwhile in its results.

of this workshop is to help the leaders of the many and varied clubs of New Hanover High School to become adept in the proper mannerisms of directing club meetings, projects, and activities. Through this training, the student learns not only to manage school organizations, but also to be at ease before a group. These things are an invaluable part of training for a career of any kind.

Vocational interest prompts their diligence.

The Vocational Industrial Club of New Hanover High School is organized for the purpose of furthering education in connection with industry. The informative classes and the job experience that students obtain in this club prepare them for their future jobs.

This club, which is advised by Mr. G. C. Brown, is very helpful in placing students in the vocation for which they are best suited and the one in which they will be the happiest. Everyone feels that the high school job experience will benefit them in future employment.

They work continuously to train for the future.

The Cooperative Office Training Practice provides a practical means by which school and employer share the joint responsibility for the training of competent office employees. Members of this industrious organization gain a high school education and also have a chance to gain a practical business education by working in various local business offices. In this way, by the promotion of on-the-job training in office work, students learn the activities and duties of a typical business office and carry a good attitude toward work by being able to earn while they learn. Because the student has developed correct business methods and proficiency in skilled subjects, he will be able to apply for a similar office job after graduation. The student who takes a job in a local office also learns the value of public relations himself and has a chance to experiment to find out what type of work he is interested in. In this way a student is given plenty of time to make the all-important decision as to which vocation he is best suited. By realizing the importance of office training, which is the main idea of the organization, a student can gain a head start in his job after graduation. The training received also helps him to perform successfully the work of an initial position in business and, through such performance, to rise to greater responsibilities and opportunities as a result.

Besides office training that is provided for the members, the organization also gives a yearly Employer-Employee Banquet. Contributions toward its arrangement are made by the advisor, Mrs. Bernice D. Bjonerud.

Because the Thespians of Hanover is a club dealing with dramatic productions at New Hanover High School, it has aroused the interest of many students and as a result has become one of the largest and most active organizations in our school. The club is unique in that it is the only dramatic club at New Hanover High School. Under the guidance of Mr. Douglas M. Swink, the members of this dramatics club have a chance to learn the fundamentals of producing a drama as well as those of acting. By taking an active part in the tasks needed for a dramatic production, each member develops a great interest in and a deep love for the theatre and what it represents. These odd jobs include setting up props for the production, advertising for the play, as well as obtaining make-up for the cast. A deep well of pride is instilled in all the members with the realization that the success or failure of each new show is completely dependent on their individual effort.

Membership in the organization is obtained from interested students who are able to prove their ability by giving a dramatic reading before a group of people. President Emily Moore, Vice-President Everett Huggins, Treasurer Harry Brooks, Recording Secretary Martha Parker, Corresponding Secretary Vickie Hodges, and Carol Fryer and Ann West, who are in charge of the scrapbook, make up the officers of the Thespians of Hanover for the year 1959-1960.

Yearly projects of the Thespians of Hanover usually include a three-act play presented early in the year and then one or two one-act plays that are presented during the middle and in the latter part of the year. This year, however, the Thespians Follies took the place of a three-act play. Members of the Thespians also take a trip to the Eastern District Play Festival, and some even have a chance to participate in the larger Carolina Dramatic Festival which is held annually in Chapel Hill. Besides these, the club also may help civic clubs or aid in various school activities by giving special performances.

Much hard work goes into each production that the Thespians give. Besides performing in their own individual plays, the members also spend a great deal of time on the backstage preparation that is needed for other school plays given by separate groups whose members are not necessarily part of the Thespians Club. By providing beautiful scenery for these plays such as the stunning Mexican scenery for the Junior Class Play this year, the Thespians have become an important part in other school productions besides their own. In this way they also have become the vital factor in all school dramatic shows and their assistance is appreciated by all at New Hanover High School.

There's a song in my heart.

The Girls Glee Clubs of New Hanover High School make up three of the five main singing groups. The experience that girls receive in these organizations may benefit them later if they apply for membership in the Mixed Chorus and then in the Hanover Singers. A girl must go through at least a year's training, however, before she may be considered for either of these groups. The Glee Club also offers satisfaction for those who do not wish to enter either the Mixed Chorus or the Hanover Singers.

The Glee Clubs participate in many of the singing activities of the school. They provide some of the assembly programs and are on hand for the Music Festival. Performances are also given for part of the student body at Christmas, Thanksgiving, or Easter. Programs may also be presented by the group for special events at the school. In such cases, special organization is made of the group and the number of members which are to take part in the production is chosen to suit the occasion.

This year the Glee Clubs were chosen to perform for the sophomores at their assembly during the Christmas season. The presentation was in Brogden Hall and opened with novelty numbers. Later songs of the standard type were added as well as those dealing with the religious side of Christmas. These all combined well to form an enjoyable program for the appreciative sophomore class. The clubs are now under the able direction of Mr. Bob L. Alexander.

The Mixed Chorus is one of the five outstanding singing groups at New Hanover High School and serves as an introduction to fine choral music. Students who make up this chorus are picked at the beginning of the year from tryouts provided by Mr. Bob L. Alexander, director of the school's vocal music department. Members of the highly respected Hanover Singers are selected from this group, making it an important and essential part of the music department.

During the year, entertainment is furnished by the Mixed Chorus for the junior high schools and various civic organizations. The Chorus also adds to its activities by presenting the student body with fine seasonal music just before the Thanksgiving holidays and also contributes to the Christmas program given by the entire music department. The Mixed Chorus is also a part of the Music Festival held each year, and some of its members participate in the operetta by providing speaking parts. Other members also are used for the supporting roles in the chorus.

This year, in addition to their other activities, the Mixed Chorus provided a sparkling performance for the junior class at their assembly. In this production the group presented several songs of romantic, humorous, and religious nature that gave the finished program a well-rounded mixture of familiar old and new standards. The program was a great success, and appreciation was shown by the junior class in their applause after the close of the show.

As a result of their laudable performances, the Mixed Chorus is remembered by everyone as a group which continually gives its best in providing a well-presented program of excellent arrangements and fine choral music.

The Hanover Singers is the most outstanding vocal group at New Hanover High School. Its main purpose is to provide the student body and the community with the best in vocal music. Its members number about sixty people each year, and each member is awarded his membership into the organization only by proving in some way that he is especially talented in vocal music.

The activities of the Hanover Singers are numerous. Starting at the beginning of the year, they give various concerts to individual groups in the junior high schools to introduce them to vocal music and to arouse their interest in the high school program. There are also performances given for the student body of New Hanover High School at assembly programs throughout the year, the main ones being given during Thanksgiving and Christmas.

After Christmas, a concert in the form of an operetta is performed by the Singers. This is the biggest project of the year by the organization, and great care and planning go into each play to present Wilmington with the best that New Hanover has to offer.

Mr. Bob L. Alexander, who is the new director of the group, has done an admirable job with the Singers during his first appearance at New Hanover High School.

The Hanover Singers presented the operetta, "High Button Shoes," last spring, and it proved to be a huge success. The leading roles were played by Mary Adams, Bill Field, JoAnn Hines, Raymond Smith, and Douglas Hunt. Pictured here are JoAnn and Raymond in the old model T that captured the fancy of the audiences in several scenes. The story was a comic romance in which Raymond, a Texas football hero, tried to win the affections of JoAnn, a small-town girl who was completely fascinated by the dazzling and smooth techniques of an exciting con-man. The story ended well, of course, with just the right touch of humor, romance, and reality that made it a pleasure to see.

The New Hanover High School Band adds much color, excitement, interest, and variation to school life. The school is very proud of this organization which represents NHHS in school activities and in community projects.

Each year the NHHS Band enters the state contest in Greensboro. In this contest the participants are required to have four selections planned. The first piece they play is a march of their choice, and the second is a selection from the other three that the judges make. In 1959, the band received a superior rating, as they have for many years; but this was the first year they have played in grade six music. They are continuing to play in this most difficult field, under Mr. William Adcock, the Band Director.

In February, band representatives go to the East Carolina Clinic for lessons and instruction in their respective fields. Members qualify for the trip by competition among the entire band.

The activities of the band are planned by the Band Council, which is made up of members of the band group. The band has such activities as participating in the North Carolina Azalea Festival Parade. An important activity is the Christmas concert and the spring concert which is given for the public. Often the band gives a concert for the high school student body in Brogden Hall. In addition to these concerts they give public performances for groups that request them.

The Boosters Club, composed of parents and interested adults of Wilmington also help coordinate the band's activities. The club sponsors an annual banquet for the band, at which time the officers and Band Council members respectively are announced and installed.

The Dance Band is another phase of the NHHS Band. They are made up of some of the members of the high school band, have the same director, Mr. Adcock, and perform for public events.

At the school football games, the school band presents enjoyable marching music and lends decoration with the orange and black uniforms. During the half-time the majorettes also perform with the band, providing a fascinating spectacle of baton twirling. The majorettes are chosen each year from the sophomore, junior, and senior classes and this year they are under the Head Majorette, Dian Gritzke.

The Key Club of New Hanover High School is a service club sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and co-sponsored by New Hanover High School. The main objectives of the club are to develop initiative and leadership, to provide experience in living and working together, to serve the school and community, and to prepare for useful citizenship.

A boy with sufficient grades can become a Key Club member if his character and leadership ability are accepted by a vote of the standing members and certified by the principal of the school.

Officers of the club are composed of a President, Jim McLamb; and a Vice-President, Monk Askew; who are elected from the Senior Class members. The Secretary, Treasurer, and Sergeant-at-Arms are elected from any of the class members and are respectively Rudy Mintz, Ed Hickman, and Elliott Free. These officers, along with three directors appointed from each class, make up the Board of Directors who run the club and its activities. Mr. Alton Wright from the Kiwanis Club acts as guide to the club along with Mr. Gurganus of New Hanover High School.

Beauty of the mind is reflected in art.

Students interested in art and craft work find a chance to apply their talents in the New Hanover High School Arts and Crafts Club. All enjoy seeing their work displayed in clever, attractive, and always purposeful bulletin boards in the halls of New Hanover High School. Their bulletin boards may show a coming season of holiday, a moral story, or just general items of interest to the students. The annual project of the club is sending children in the hospital at Christmas some of their season's art work. Miss Ann Mitchell is the advisor of the club. Discussion promotes better understanding.

The Debating Society of New Hanover High School has a membership of thirteen. It has as its objectives to promote an interest in world and local affairs and to give an understanding of public speaking to its members. This is done by having debates and discussions concerning social, political, and economical affairs. It now has the task of establishing itself locally and then joining with the National Debating Society. This year's officers are working with Mr. John J. Scott, faculty advisor, to enlarge the club. Journalism is rewarded by excellent publications.

Jim Barnhill, Business Manager of the Wildcat, talks with Mrs. Galphin, faculty advisor, in a moment of leisure. Charlotte Creech, Editor-in-Chief, joins them to discuss their mutual Wildcat interests.

The Wildcat, which is the school's newspaper publication, has won several first place awards in classification with papers of the same size.

This year the Editor-in-Chief of the Wildcat is Charlotte Creech. It is her job to write all the editorials and advise the other staff members when necessary. The Business Manager, Jim Barnhill, is in charge of all advertisements and financial matters. He takes charge of the sale of ads and subscriptions which provides the Wildcat with its funds. The business staff works along with the manager to promote the newspaper and take care of the details of the financial department.

The many features of the paper, including school sports events, club news, gossip, and opinion polls, must be turned in approximately two weeks before the newspaper comes out. Before each of the ten issues is sent to press, the staff members, advised by Mrs. Cordelia Galphin, work hard trying to have their section completed by the deadline. The editorial staff compiles and writes up all of the news. They are responsible for finding out and providing what the students of the school like to read. They work diligently over and beyond their journalism class period to write news of interest to the student body, and their efforts are rewarded by a very successful and popular school publication. The Wildcat announces for the first time the May Queen and Court, the Senior Superlatives, and other exciting events of school life and participation.

Under the supervision of Miss Fannie O'Keef and Miss Martha Cromartie, members of the circulation staff distribute the papers during homeroom period. They have the responsibility of seeing that each homeroom receives the correct number of copies for those who bought yearly subscriptions and extra copies to be sold by the homeroom chairmen. This staff also collects the money and any extra papers from the homerooms all over the school.

Working together to complete the layouts and conduct interviews for the paper, the Wildcat staff as a journalism class learns a great deal about running a newspaper. Theirs is a large responsibility which requires integrity and ability, virtues which the Wildcat staff possesses in each staff member. Because it is a newspaper representing a great deal of time and effort, the Wildcat is truly an asset to the life around N. H. H. S.

The 1960 Hanoverian reflects . . .

The work needed to compile the high school yearbook consumes the spare time of the staff members from the middle of summer until the end of the first semester.

The complexity involved in the make-up of a book that will aptly represent the school and its activities is such that various specialized staffs, such as the features, activity, sports, and class, are required for the completion of the yearbook. These staffs combine their tasks to form the annual Hanoverian.

First comes the sale of ads by all the members of the staff in order to help pay the immense sum needed for publishing the Hanoverian. When this is done, the job of selling subscriptions begins. During this time, pictures are taken of the events, projects, and people that make up school and its activities, including sports, clubs, features, and individual pictures. The various staffs are assigned to these different phases of New Hanover High School life.

selection of the theme and the colors. Each staff member is asked to present his individual ideas in the form of drawings or pictures. From the comparison of these drawings and the combination of ideas, the staff reaches a decision. This choice requires more thought than one would expect, because each will have a great bearing on the success and quality of the book.

When the publication of the Hanoverian is complete, there is an election of the next year's editor and business manager by the staff members. This is a hard choice to make when one considers that all the members of the staff have done their work well and all of them are capable of the offices.

As the school progresses and enlarges each year, so the yearbook must enlarge. Because of this, we continually have the largest book ever—this year being no exception. The distribution of Hanoverians in the spring marks the close of the staff's work. All the secrets the staff have kept about theme and colors are finally revealed to everyone in the new Hanoverian.

Athletics

Every New Hanover High School student who passes the trophy case in Brogden Hall is proud of the accomplishments for which these trophies stand; these trophies represent many hours of hard work and practice and the willingness of the participants to do their best at all times. But most of all, these memorable trophies stand for the teamwork and team spirit which is present at New Hanover High School. Hand in hand with team spirit and teamwork is good sportsmanship, an element emphatically stressed at NHHS. There is graciousness in either victory or defeat.

The students who are not on one of the teams or in the Girls' Athletic Association have the opportunity to show school spirit and team support by attending the ball games. Led by the cheerleaders, the students proudly cheer their team on in hopes of emerging victorious.

New Hanover is well represented by a variety of sports; gymnasium and stadium are filled from fall, when the first football game stirs the students to excited cheers, to late spring, when the last crack of the bat resounds across the diamond. There is something of interest to every fan; there is pride, too, when he sees excellence in his favorite sport by his favorite team.

Athletics is a relaxing source of enjoyment, one which is part of the sunshine and shadows of school life.

N.H.H.S. football team makes an . . .

In order to have a winning team, a school must have both superior players and a superior coaching staff. The fact that NHHS has both can be proved by examining the outstanding record of past teams. NHHS certainly has had more than its share of victories in past years. This outstanding record can be largely attributed to the coaching of Mr. Leon Brogden and Mr. Jasper Davis.

Mr. Brogden holds the position of head coach and director of boys athletics here at NHHS. Mr. Brogden is a graduate of Wake Forest College where he participated in all three major sports. He held the position of end on the football team, forward on the basketball team, and third baseman on the baseball team. After graduating from Wake Forest, Mr. Brogden went to Edenton where he coached the high school team until 1936. He then went to Wilson to coach high school sports there until 1945. In July 1945, he came to NHHS where he has gained the reputation of being one of the finest coaches in the South.

Mr. Davis, better known to the boys as "Coach Jap", is assistant head coach here at New Hanover. He works with the football and basketball teams in the fall and winter, and he is in charge of the golf and tennis teams during the spring. Mr. Davis is a graduate of Duke University where he held the position of full-back on the football team. While at Duke he won the honors of being chosen for the All-Southern team and the Chicago Herald Tribune's All-American team. He also played in the Rose Bowl in 1938. After spending several years in the service, Mr. Davis started coaching at NHHS in 1946.

impressive record under its capable leaders.

With the sound of the kick-off whistle, the NHHS Wildcats started their 1959 season with a 21-12 nonconference loss to the E. C. Glass High School team from Lynchburg, Virginia. Lynchburg got off to a good start by making two straight touchdowns before the Wildcats had a chance to score. The first touchdown was the result of a 36 yard run and the second a 98 yard run after intercepting a Wildcat pass. The Wildcats got back in the game before halftime though, when fullback Larry Flowers recovered a Lynchburg fumble and ran 39 yards for a touchdown. The Cats made a fine defensive showing in the third quarter when they threw Lynchburg back for a 24 yard loss on one series of plays and a nine yard loss on another. Lynchburg's third touchdown came early in the fourth period, and NHHS added its second a few minutes later when the Wildcat passing attack really started to function. The attack came too late in the game, though, to convert the losing score to a winning one.

The Wildcats traveled to High Point for their next nonconference battle. The Cats got off to a fast start when Jerry Spivey made two touchdowns on aerials from quarterback Earl Cole, and Cole made the third on a bootleg play around the end. Toby Sandlin kicked the conversion point after the third touchdown, giving the Cats a 19-0 lead. High Point then turned on the power in the second half, making two straight touchdowns against the Cats. The Wildcats were blessed with a shortage of time when time ran out with High Point on the Wildcat one yard line.

On their first conference game of the season, the Wildcats made a fine showing of strength as they trounced the Rocky Mount Blackbirds 12-0 here at Legion Stadium. The score would have probably been more one-sided had it not been for the 95 yards the Wildcats were penalized during the game. Guard Monk Askew provided the Wildcats with their first scoring opportunity when he recovered a Blackbird fumble on their 15 yard line. Halfback Rudy Mintz then rushed up through the middle for the first touchdown of the game. Toby Sandlin, the other halfback, then made the second touchdown on a 64 yard pass play from quarterback Earl Cole. All of the scoring was done in the first half, but the Cats were forced to use some strong defensive tactics during the fourth period in order to hold back a Blackbird scoring threat. Even though the Wildcats did win the game, the 12-0 score showed a weakness in the Wildcat's offense in that both touchdowns were made without the extra points.

Wildcat errors proved to be the deciding factor in their second conference game as they lost to the homestanding Raleigh Caps by a score of 3-0. The Cats gave the ball to Raleigh seven times during the game—four on fumbles and three on intercepted passes. The Wildcats made a total of five touchdown threats but were stopped each time by a fumble or an intercepted pass. With less than a minute left in the first half, Raleigh recovered a Wildcat fumble on the Cat's eleven yard line; and Raleigh's fullback Alex Bell kicked a field goal giving them a 3-0 lead. Both teams were unable to score in the second half; so Raleigh won the game even though NHHS beat them in every department except scoring.

After being postponed because of rain, the game with the Goldsboro Earthquakes was rescheduled for the following Monday night on which the Wildcats tripped the Earthquakes for a 38-13 loss. As usual the passing of quarterback Earl Cole was a feature of the game. In connecting with ten out of eighteen attempts, the Wildcats gained a total passing yardage of 213 yards. Three of the completed passes resulted in Wildcat touchdowns; while excellent ground play accounted for the other three. NHHS substituted freely during the second half and still held its own.

Next, the Wildcats traveled to Wilson for their second conference loss. The Cats got off to a fast start when they drove 61 yards in the opening moments of the game for the first touchdown; however, they failed to make the extra point. Wilson then scored and made the extra point, giving them a 7-6 lead. Neither team scored in the second half, so Wilson walked away with the victory. This was the only time during the season that the Wildcats lost a game because of the failure to make an extra point; however, this once was enough to keep them out of the Eastern AAAA playoffs.

Although the extra point meant defeat in the Wilson game, it meant victory for the Wildcats in the homecoming game against Durham. Fullback Larry Flowers racked up both Wildcat touchdowns, and the improved kicking toe of Toby Sandlin allowed the Cats to get both extra points. Durham managed to make two touchdowns also but failed to make one of the extra points which gave the Wildcats a 14-13 victory. Rain held back the Wildcat's passing attack, but they did well on the ground.

On the last game of the season, the Wildcats met Fayetteville in another muddy battle at Legion Stadium. The Wildcats got off to a good Expert advice is given by the coaches.

The Wildcats opened the 1959-1960 basketball season on December 11 playing host to four teams. Asheville, Raleigh, and Columbia, South Carolina journeyed to Wilmington for a non-conference practice tournament. In the second game of a double-header on Friday night the New Hanover High School fans came out to see their team beat Asheville. The Wildcats led throughout the entire game and ended up with a final score of 68-54.

An even larger crowd turned out the following Saturday night, and the Cats were victors again. Dreher High School from Columbia, South Carolina put up stiff competition for the Wildcats and were behind only 2 points at the end of the first period and also at the half. Terry Ronner and Billy Brogden each scoring 15 points helped to bring their team ahead with a 68-46 final score.

The second week of basketball found the Brogdenmen traveling to Raleigh for another non-conference tournament. The first part of the game between Greensboro and Wilmington was nip and tuck, but the Wildcats began to hit better during the second half and edged out in front of the Whirlies, defeating them 50-36.

With less than five seconds remaining in the Saturday night game, the Cats lagged behind the High Point Bisons one point. Billy Brogden chanced a shot from mid court, and the ball swished through the basket as the buzzer sounded but capturing for the Wildcats their fourth seasonal victory.

The outlook for the Wildcats was encouraging as they prepared for a conference game with Raleigh. This game proved to be a disappointment, for the RALEIGH TEAM defeated Wilmington 51-43. Hitting 15 out of 23 at the foul line and 14 out of 34 field goals, the Cats were unable to gain any advantage over the Caps.

The Wildcats came back with a strong force and downed the Fayetteville Bulldogs 76-31. The Brogdenmen displayed outstanding ability by scoring

The Rocky Mount game was a third conference success for Wilmington. Terry Ronner, scoring 21 points, led the Wildcats to a 55-44 victory.

Durham and Wilmington fought a bitter battle, and with 3 seconds left in the game the score was tied 51-51. A foul was called against the Bulldogs, and Terry Ronner stepped to the line making two successful attempts, pulling his team ahead 53-51.

The Wildcats claimed second place after overriding Goldsboro 77-42. Four of the five starters boasted two figures in scoring. Terry Ronner led with 19, followed by Don Marshall with 14, Phil Stevenson with 12, and Jerry Spivey with 11.

The second upset of the season again came at the hands of the Raleigh Caps who dropped the Wildcats 55-50 in an overtime battle.

The team next traveled to Fayetteville to defeat the helpless Bulldogs with a 63-34 victory. Returning home, the Cats trounced the Wilson Cyclones 55-39 for their seventh conference win of the season. Ronner and Marshall paced the Wildcat scorers.

The Brogdenmen next met the Darkhorses of Clinton High in a non-conference game in Wilmington. The Cats dumped the 3-A team by a score of 70-55. The attack was led by Co-captain Ronner and Marshall who both scored in the double figures.

Next in line were the Rocky Mount Blackbirds, whom the Port City cagemen defeated 60-46. Terry Ronner was the undisputed pace-setter of the game with a total of 33 points. The Cats then traveled to Durham for their 11th conference game. Wilmington didn't gain a lead until 23 seconds before the half, but they kept their lead throughout the game and halted the Bulldogs, 55-48.

ton. On the second night of the tournament the Cats routed the Wilson Cyclones with a score of 69-39. This victory put the Wildcats in line to play Raleigh in the finals. Even though the Raleigh Caps had given the Wildcats their only two defeats during the season, the Cats still had high hopes of coming through on top. This they did with a 58-51 victory over the Caps.

Having won first place in the eastern conference, the Wildcats journeyed to Greensboro for the first State tournament game with High Point.

From the first, the Wildcats got the jump on the Bisons and stayed ahead during the entire game. With a half-time score of 31-14, the Wildcats went on to defeat High Point 71-45. Four of the Wilmington starters scored in the double figures.

The local cagers next romped over the Wilson Cyclones to qualify them for the final round against the Raleigh Caps. Terry Ronner, big center and co-captain, contributed 23 markers to the Wildcat's score as he hit seven out of nine from the floor and nine out of ten from the charity mark.

In the final rounds of the tourney, the Brogdenmen took an early lead and ran the score up to 33-22 at the halftime. The Cats hit from everywhere on the floor, threw up a strong defense, and finally stomped Raleigh 80-46. This was the fourth state championship win for the Wildcat cagemen in five years.

Wilmington not only walked away with the championship but with other awards as well. Three of the Wildcat starters, Terry Ronner, Don Marshall, and Billy Brogden were chosen for the all-tourney team; and co-captain Ronner was also given an award for being the most outstanding player in the tournament.

The faculty and students of NHHS are certainly proud of the fine team record and expert coaching displayed during the basketball season.

NHHS Team reigns as the . . .

The Wildcats of New Hanover High School had a lot to live up to as the 1959 baseball season opened. The '57 team had reigned as state champions, and the '58 team had gone as far as the AAA eastern title. The returning lettermen, Leon Brogden, Jr., Freddie Ray, Cameron Morgan, Jimmy Worthington, Burt Chiemiego, Larry Edens, and Jerry Spivey along with the newly added ones possessed the needed desire and ability that takes a team to the top.

In the first conference game the 'Cats played host to Fayetteville and defeated them 5-3. The Brogdenmen came out with a record of 13 runs, 13 hits, and 4 errors.

Jerry Hardee, a slender fast-moving catcher, is an excellent reserve for 1960 season.

Wilt Leeuwenburg, a junior with a good pitching arm, is a good prospect for 1960.

Bunny Batson, the big sophomore, proved to be a powerful hitter during the 1959 season.

To draw a very successful season to a close, the Brogdenmen traveled to Wilson and crushed them 4-2.

These outstanding baseball players had won for New Hanover High School the Eastern Championship with 10-2 conference record. In the regular season Freddie Ray batted highest with a .351 average followed by Rudy Mintz and a .340 average. Freddie Ray was also the outstanding pitcher with a 7-2 record. Larry Edens had a 3-0 record; Louis Howard, one of 2-0; and Earl Cole, 1-0.

Greensboro, having gained the Western Championship, journeyed to Wilmington for the state play-offs. The championship would be determined by the best two out of three games. The Wildcats took the first game 6-2 with Ray pitching and the second 5-1, acknowledging themselves as the undisputed State Champions.

The coaches responsible for this record—Coach Davis and Coach Brogden—have as great if not greater bearing on the outcome of the season as the players. Their diligent work, valuable experience, and promotion of good sportsmanship is of utmost benefit and is highly commendable.

Varsity Sweetheart Frances LeNeave receives her flowers from Earl Cole after being crowned by Rudy Mintz.

Varsity Sweetheart is the Team's ideal girl.

Suspense hung heavy over the dance floor as NHHS students awaited the presentation of the Varsity Sweetheart.

The floor was cleared as the Head Cheerleader took the microphone, for it was ten o'clock and time for the evening's highlights. First the varsity team members were introduced. In behalf of the cheerleaders who sponsored the Football Finals Dance, Judy Pluta announced their sweetheart, Coach Jasper Davis, who was presented a gift. "Our Varsity Sweetheart is," said Judy as she frantically tore open the white envelope, "Miss Frances LeNeave." Applause echoed from wall to wall as the blond beauty took her place on the throne and was crowned and presented a bouquet of red roses by Co-Captains Rudy Mintz and Earl Cole.

The varsity had chosen this girl as their ideal. The enthusiasm of the students showed that the team had made a wise choice.

Cheering at the games was not the cheerleaders' only contributions; for, under head cheerleader Judy Pluta, they carried out many other projects. Sportsmanship week, sponsored each year by the cheerleaders, did much to boost the school spirit. During football season, they decorated one goalpost with Wildcat colors and the other with the other team's colors.

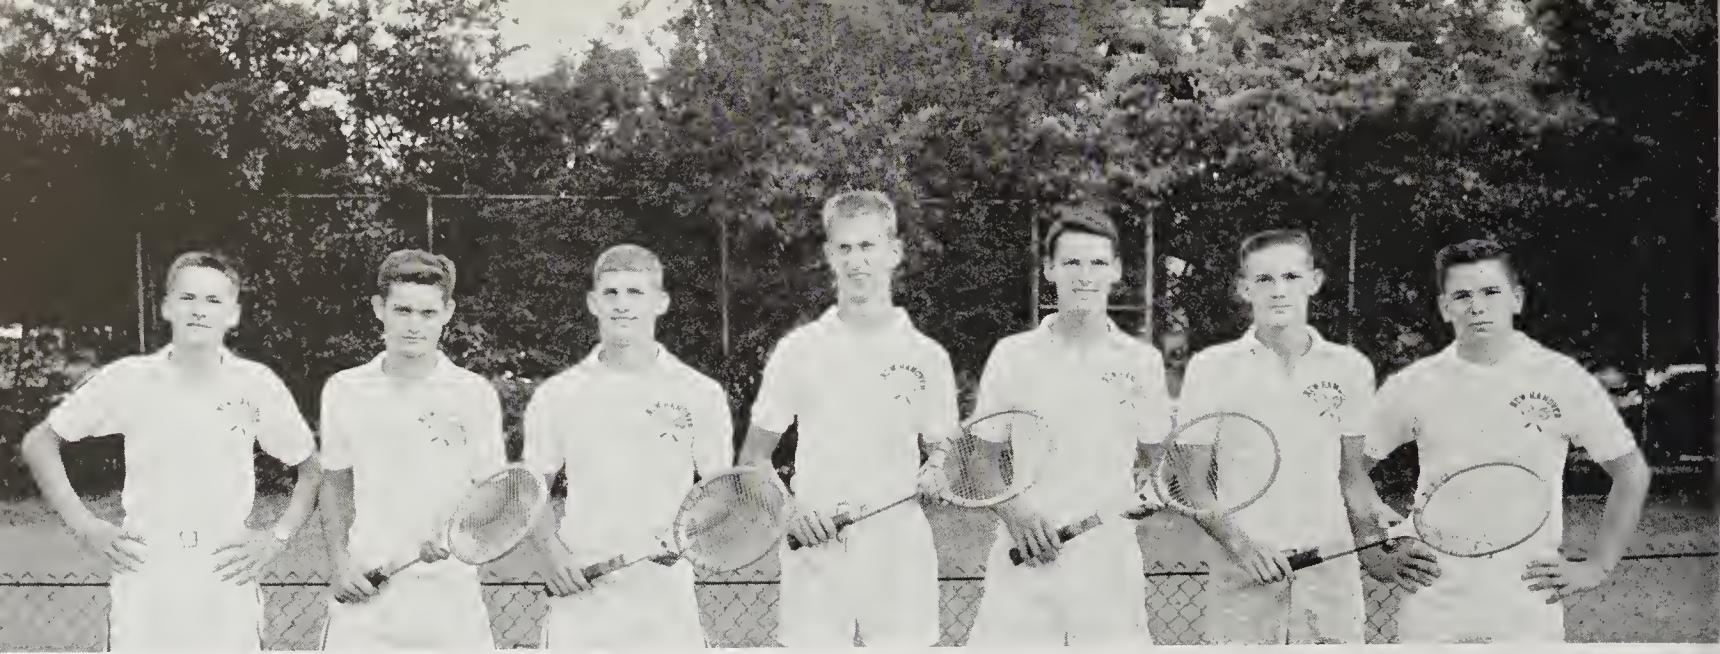

The cheerleaders were led by their officers: head cheerleader, Judy Pluta; assistant, Vicki Hodges; secretary-treasurer, Jane Mitchell; bulletin board chairman, Peggy Harriss.

To increase variety, new ideas were brought out. Jimmy Shepherd was adopted as mascot. He accompanied the cheerleaders in all their activities and added much color in his Wildcat costume. A boy was added to the squad this year, and he is Eddie Anderson. Judy Teague, an alternate cheerleader, later became a permanent member of the group.

Dennis Daniels is a great asset to the Tennis Group.

During the hot, humid days of early summer, while NHHS students travel blissfully homeward with that melancholy air that always accompanies the last months of school, a handful of boys take great pride in putting together a tennis team that really excels. On the afternoons of these "lazy days", Coach Jasper Davis can be found working patiently with the boys trying to improve their skills and teach them new fundamentals, so that they might have a good season.

The whole team goes through a daily routine that gradually becomes automatic, though never unnecessary or purposeless. Then on other days they observe the fruits of their long hours of practice as they meet the opposition. This year's team is looking forward to a good year as they play a full schedule with some of the best tennis teams in this part of the country.

Last, but not least, is the State Playday at Greensboro. All year long the girls look forward to this time when they may participate in this big sports program at Woman's College.

All the girls show great ability in athletics, but more important is the outstanding way in which each girl co-operates with Mrs. Tillitt to bring about a pleasant atmosphere of good sportsmanship. After having successfully completed a year's work of studying under Mrs. Tillitt, each girl can look back on a year well spent. Not only does each girl have the opportunity to gain experience in participating in a variety of sports, but she also puts into practice many valuable rules of good sportsmanship. R.O.T.C.

When the sun sinks low in the heavens, all that may be seen is a shadow of color guard standing in readiness to defend the flag of the United States and the multitude of principles behind it. The color guard is a living symbol of defense, honor, responsibility, and leadership—qualities that are necessary to safeguard the future of this country and the ideals of democracy.

The purpose of the ROTC is one of fostering good relations between cadets and promoting school spirit and patriotism. Aside from military instruction, there are many varied activities in which the cadets may participate. One may bring favorable publicity to his school by his participation in the Cape Fear Rifles or the Rifle Team; there is also the presentation of sponsors at the homecoming game and of officers at the ROTC Ball. The activities from which a cadet may choose are innumerable.

Since this is the only unit of its kind of both North and South Carolina, the New Hanover High School ROTC must maintain very high standards in order for it to retain its rating as honor battalion. As an honor battalion, it must follow an honor code at all times.

In making preparation in the sunshine and shadows of today, the ROTC cadets insure a bright, secure future both for themselves and for every other American.

The outstanding . . .

Harold Wells, John Stout, Larry Mincey, and Artis Joye are shown displaying the colors. These cadets who are also members of the Non-Commissioned Officers' Club, try to uphold with pride and dignity the respect of the ROTC Corps.

The patriotic spirit of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps is reflected by the distinguished appearance of the New Hanover High School Color Guard. As the Color Guard marches with the Battle Group to the weekly parades, pride and self-respect are shown on the faces of the cadets. The Color Guard members for the year 1960 are Harold W. Wells, John R. Stout, Larry W. Mincey, and Artis R. Joye.

These cadets are responsible for the custody and display of the emblems at parades and reviews. The Senior officer is also responsible for carrying the colors. They are also expected to uphold the high standards of the Battle Group, as set by those who have gone before them. They serve as a constant reminder to the cadet corps that it is the responsibility of each cadet in the corps to make the entire unit work efficiently. This great spirit of the ROTC Corps is certainly reflected in their slogan, "learn today, lead tomorrow."

Battle Group Sponsor.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps of New Hanover High School, which has been an honor unit since its establishment in 1937, is the only unit of its kind in all of the North Carolina high schools.

The Battle Group Staff along with the regular army instructors help the unit to uphold the high standards of the corps. The general objective of the Junior ROTC Course is to lay the foundation for intelligent citizenship by teaching the principles of leadership, the respect for constituted authority, and the habits of precision and courtesy.

The Battle Group also tries to retain the rating of an honor unit, which means that each cadet must follow his honor code at all times as well as prepare to defend his country should the need arise.

The qualifications for joining the Reserve Officers' Training Corps limit the membership to male students who are citizens of the United States, fourteen years of age or older, and physically fit as verified by a medical doctor's certificate. If a cadet later joins a branch of the Armed Forces, he will find that he has received valuable elementary military training benefiting both him and his country as a result of the high school ROTC program.

The ROTC unit with all of its divisions takes an active part in the events of the school and the community alike. They perform and parade in the Homecoming Game, one of the biggest events of the school year. It is at this game that each company presents its sponsor along with the entire Battle Group presenting its sponsor.

The ROTC unit is remembered by thousands of North Carolinians for its part in the annual Azalea Festival and parade.

Commissioned Officers excel in leadership.

Each year the ROTC Battle Group organizes its competent leaders as the Officers' Club. This group of cadet officers meets to make plans for the various activities of the corps. Among the many activities is the planning of the ROTC Military Ball in December. Many hours of discussion and hard work go into this project.

The officers of the Officers' Club for 1960 are President, Luke Potter; Vice-President, Thomas Green; Secretary and Treasurer, Jimmy Sharpe; Parliamentarian, Ervin Stack.

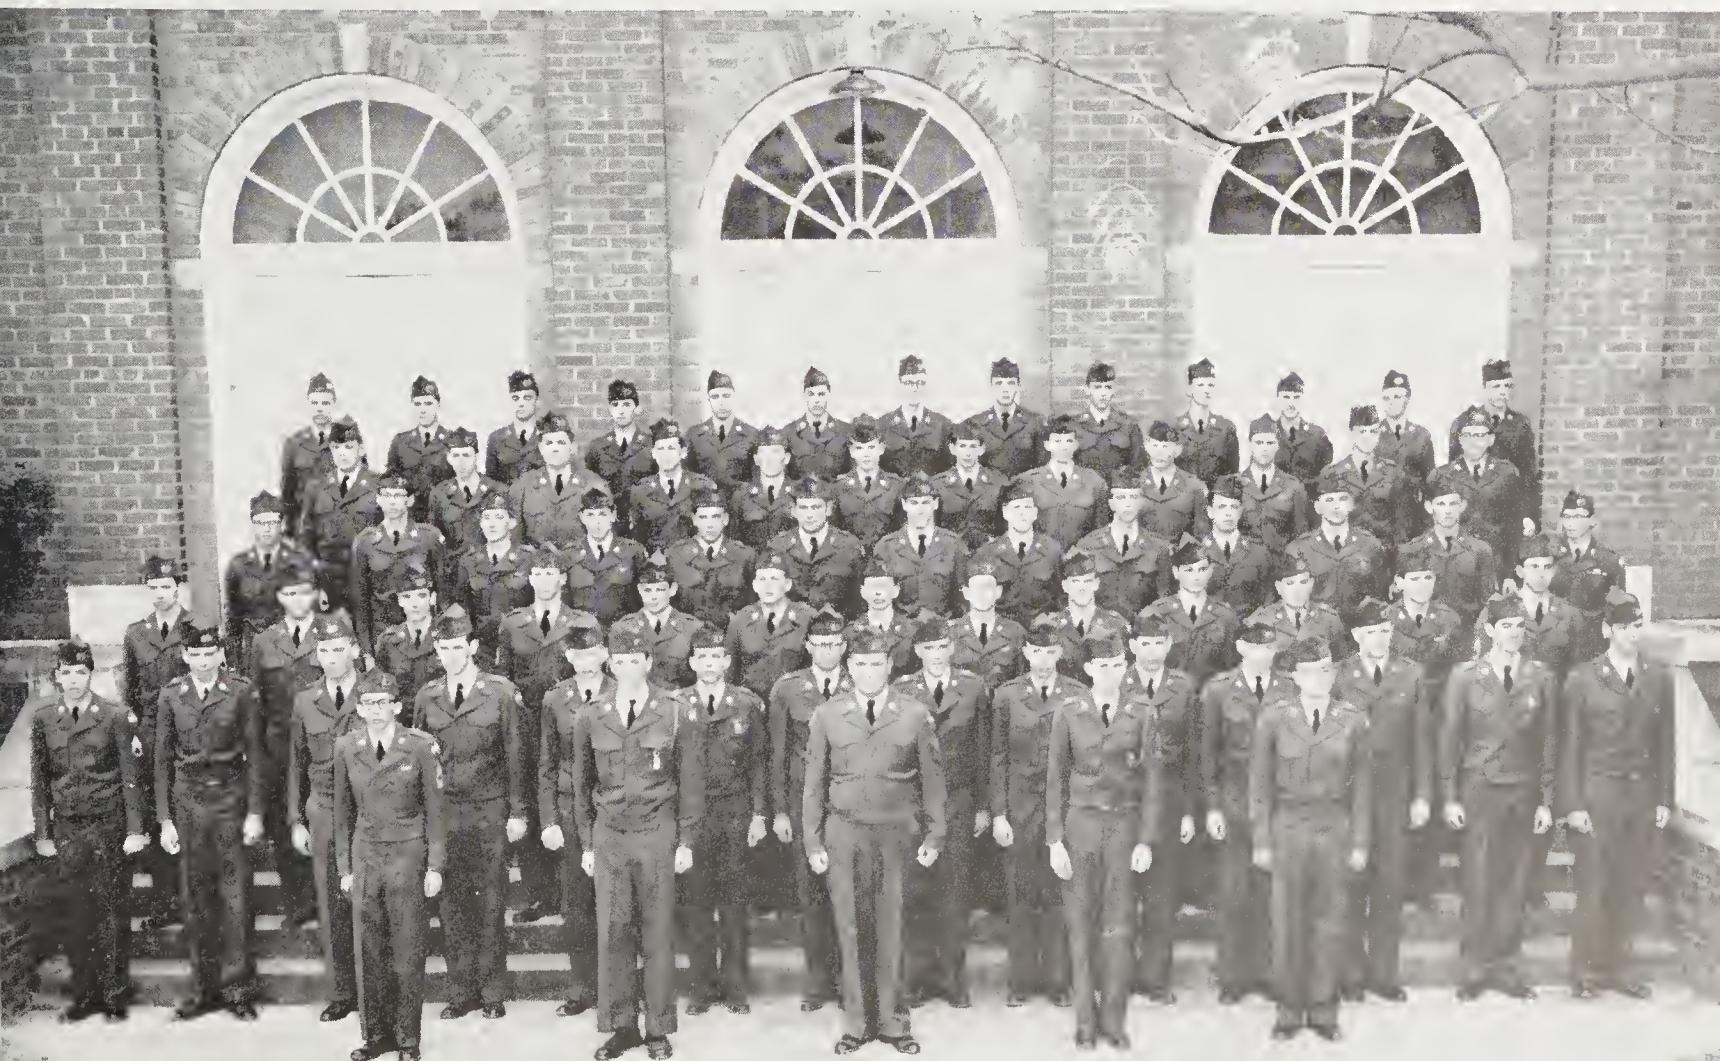

The purpose of the club is to perform social functions, to foster better relations between cadet officers, and to promote fellowship, school spirit and patriotism. The officers this year are very impressive with their new officers' uniforms which were acquired for the first time. Being one of the most active organizations in school, the cadets have to put many hours of work into ROTC. With such capable leaders, the ROTC Corps should surely be congratulated and given recognition for its outstanding work.

Non-Commissioned Officers learn to lead.

The Non-Commissioned Officers' Club was organized to create fellowship and learning. These cadets, excelling in leadership and service, form the backbone of the corps. Membership in the club is on a voluntary basis and open to all second year cadet officers. Selected from its ranks are four cadets who also serve as members of the Color Guard. The members enjoy teaching the beginning cadets the fundamentals of ROTC. This gives the officers valuable experience in basic teaching methods which is a great asset to the future leaders of the corps.

Company "A"

The ROTC Corps is composed of four companies, a band, a color guard, and a staff. Each cadet in the company works diligently toward the Monday reviews and Friday parades. Every shoe and piece of brass is highly shined as the unit marches to the local parade field for its review. Marching proudly and leading Company A are Cadet Captain Jimmy Sharpe and Cadet Captain Pat Moore, sponsor. Each movement is executed with precision, and great care is placed on correct posture and proper military bearing. Each command is carefully and precisely carried out by the unit with the skill of an expertly trained corps.

First year cadets: Tim H. Atkins, Michael Ballard, David A. Banner, James C. Batchelor, Harry E. Bethea, Jr., Howard L. Carter, Wilbert E. Cherry, Jr., Vernon L. Collins, Jr., Auley M. Company "B"

After the morning reviews, each company prepares for its inspection. Company Commander Cadet Captain Ervin Stack and sponsor Cadet Captain Becky Dail, inspect their company. Then on Friday comes the selection of a honor cadet on the basis of personal neatness and military knowledge. Each honor cadet from the four companies returns after school and a distinguished cadet for the week is chosen from them.

During the drill period strong command voices and proper manuals are stressed. Hard work and many hours of practice are what make a company truly outstanding.

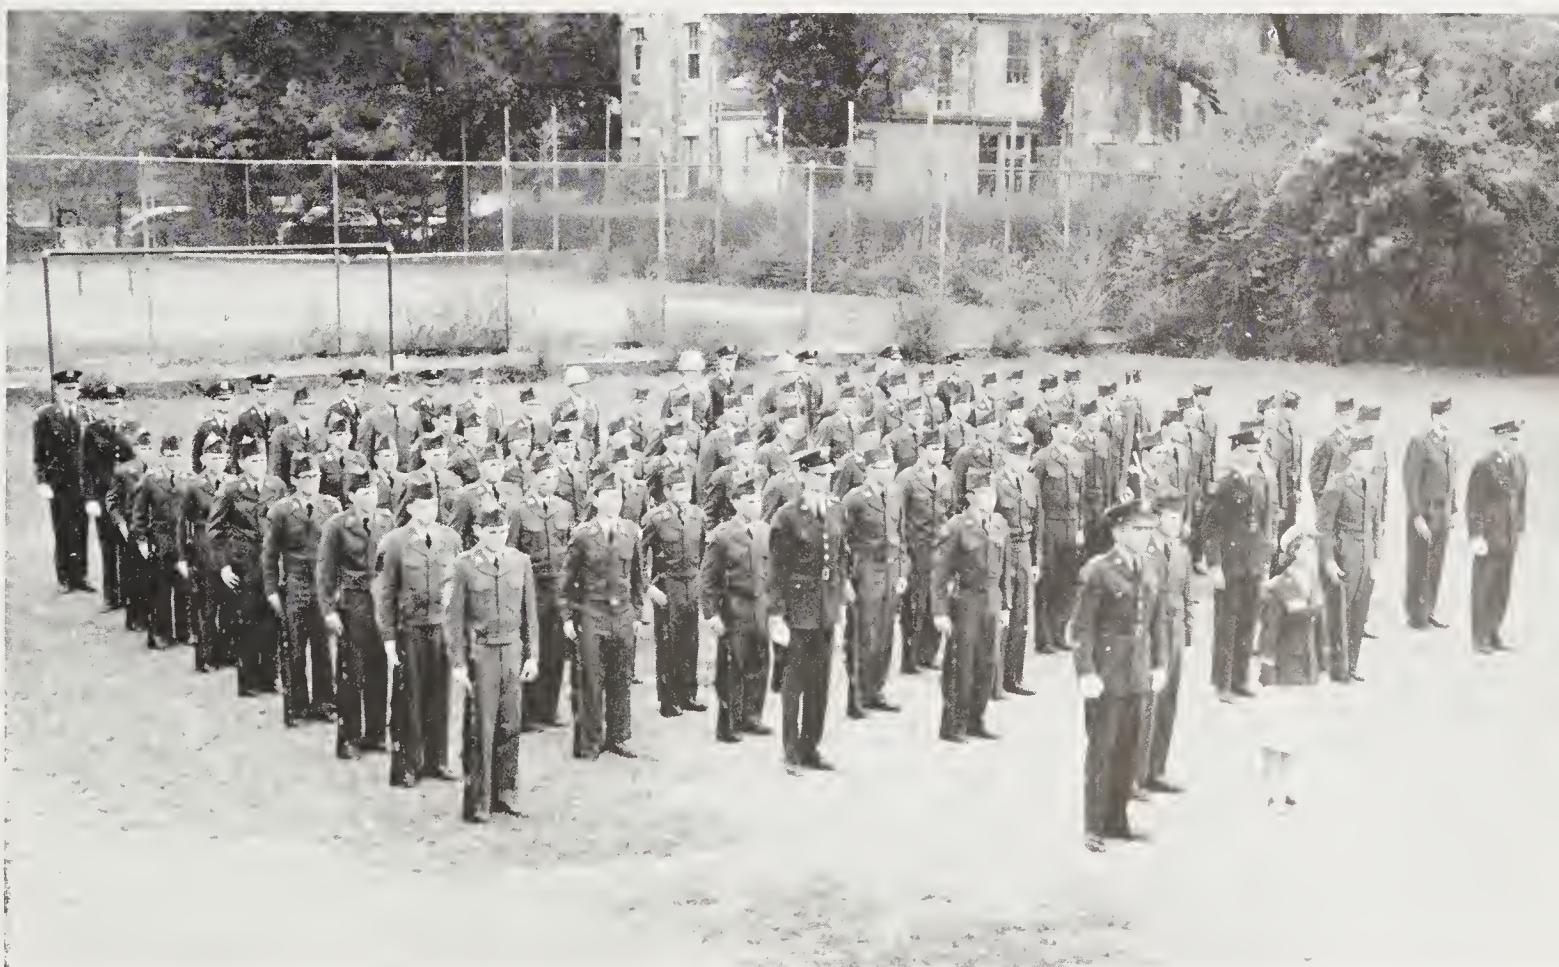

Honorary Captain Becky Dail, Company Sponsor.

Company "C"

Honorary Captain Bobbie Green
Company Sponsor.

The key word in ROTC is preparation. Not all of the training given the cadets is military. In his second year, each cadet is given the opportunity to exercise commands and take on positions of responsibility. This helps to develop the individual as well as the whole group.

Company Commander Cadet Captain Robert Cantwell and his sponsor, Cadet Captain Bobbie Green see that each cadet receives the merits to which he is entitled.

Every week during the parades, the companies are rated by the staff and army instructors. These ratings are then compiled and a honor company of the week is chosen. It certainly is a proud unit that is chosen the honor company of the week.

First year cadets: George T. Ange, Roger A. Arthur, Larry Brewer, James R. Burris, David R. Casey, Donald R. Cummings, Gill B. Davis, Robert L. DeBose, A. C. Everett, Jr., Bernie K. Company "D"

Cadets who are outstanding in any field of military work or who participate in any outside work of ROTC receive a medal or ribbon. Each time a cadet wins honor cadet or distinguished cadet, he is awarded his ribbon. Toward the end of the year other awards are given to the outstanding first year cadet, second year cadet, company, platoon, and squad. Also awarded is the Cape Fear Sword which goes to the outstanding third year cadet who has the highest overall average and has accomplished the most in ROTC. This award is presented annually by the Northeastern Carolina Citadel Alumni.

Teamwork is shown by the Cape Fear Rifles.

Executing the Queen Anne salute with expert team work are the following members of the Cape Fear Rifles: Eirikur Freeman, Michael Gray, Wallace Gray, and Robert Baxter.

This year the Cape Fear Rifles, working as a unit of the ROTC, has brought favorable publicity to the Battle Group and the High School. The distinguished Rifles, composed of first and second year cadets and led by Cadet Captain John H. Peterson, give an impressive appearance as they march through their formations. The unit with its precision movements and brilliantly executed manuals performed at many occasions such as the Sword Presentation, the ROTC Ball, the presentation of sponsors, and the Azalea Festival. This year the Cape Fear Rifles are making plans to attend the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D. C. In preparation for the big trip, each cadet practices for three to four hours a week. Every weapon that is to be carried is broken down and carefully cleaned. We are sure that the Rifles will do a fine job of representing the High School in this national event.

The Band provides the Battle Group music.

The ROTC Band, composed of members of the high school band who are enrolled in ROTC, furnishes the Battle Group with military music for its parades and formations. This year the band is under the direction of Mr. William Adcock and led by Cadet Captain Tony Lanier. The band selected as its sponsor this year honorary Cadet Captain Jean Graham.

Members of the band practice two homeroom periods during the week and report for classroom instruction at additional periods. During these additional periods the members are given classes on health, map reading, military customs, and the use of individual and crew-served weapons. This gives the band a double job in the corps. However, with its lively marches and wide selection of music, the band forms an outstanding part of the corps. It is a great honor to be a proud member of such a distinguished group.

Kneeling: James R. Burris, James W. Hightower, Elton G. Tucker, Tim H. Atkins, Jerry R. Robbins.

Standing: Patrick Gallagher, Milton T. Gerock, Louis J. Howard, Lawrence A. Cheek, Isaac T. Reynolds, Ronald J. DeYoung, William D. Alred.

Experts at marksmanship and leadership.

The ROTC Rifle Team is one of the most outstanding units in the corps. The squad is composed of members chosen by competitive firing and led by Cadet Captain DeYoung. The Rifle Team competes in matches starting on an inter-school basis and can proceed as high as competing in the national championships, as they did last year. Before the team can compete in the national matches, it must first earn the right to shoot in that match by firing in the top thirty per cent of all the teams in the Third Army Area. They also finished fifth in the William Randolph Hearst matches.

Milton Gerock and William Alred inspect their final score.

Perfect form is demonstrated by Jerry Robbins, Louis Howard, Isaac Reynolds, and Ronald DeYoung.

The first big event of the year is the Commission Ceremony where cadets receive their ranks.

During the year the Battle Group participates in many activities. We hope that we have here recorded some of those cherished moments for you.

The year begins in ROTC with the impressive Commission Ceremony. At this time the third year cadets receive their ranks, and the corps becomes organized. The next two main activities are the enjoyable Homecoming game and the long-awaited ROTC Ball. Most of the cadets and their dates will long remember the Ball, the Cape Fear Rifles' performance, and the presentation of sponsors during the dance.

One couple leaves the ROTC Ball after an impressive evening of fun and dancing.

Classes

In the bustling classroom, a lone student sits quietly studying. The sun peeps in but goes unnoticed, for the quest of knowledge keeps one's undivided attention.

Scenes like this mark the high school years. A sophomore must study to gain a foundation that will keep him in the light of knowledge and not floundering in the darkness of ignorance. A junior realizes that his future might well depend on his ability to succeed in these, his formative years, and thus studies to acquire all the learning he can. And the senior, on the last step before he must cross over the threshold into the future, must study so that he may cross the line with head erect.

Yet the studying is but a part of school life. The social activities necessary for a well-rounded education are not neglected, and the student at New Hanover an opportunity to find his place in the social world through the many extra curricular activities. With the process of learning so supplemented by the many gayer highlights of the high school years, these years become a time of reflections and happiness, a time of pensive and gay moods. The sophomore views high school as a strange new wonderland; the junior, as a base on which to build a bright future; and the senior, the light years before the not-so-distant future claims him.

All the components of high school life — the seriousness of study, the happiness of sharing friendships, the gaiety of social activities — contribute to make precious memories which will live through the sunshine and shadows of the rushing years.

SOPHOMORE CLASS

Looking toward their high school future are the Sophomore Class Officers:
Nancy Locke, vice-president; Cole Porter, president; and Pat Robertson, secretary.

Entering high school with many fears and dreads, the sophomore timidly seeks to encourage new friendships and to renew the old ones. With much confusion he sets out to find his new class. After finding it, he discovers that it is especially embarrassing to have been sitting in a room for most of the period and then to be in the wrong class.

The election of Sophomore Officers, Class Senators, and May Court Representatives fulfills the desire to be a real part of New Hanover High School. The Twirl Dance allowed the sophomores to show the school their ability to help have a successful year. The ball games provided these new members a chance to support the teams, and they make up the larger cheering section.

Then the shadowy, dark sides of school began to drift through; the first exams, the duties and responsibilities of each individual, and the task of growing older compile the memories of this Sophomore Class. These memories create new thoughts and impressions of high school. The young and growing minds of the students learn about Julius Caesar, the American poets and writers, and explore the field of science concerning man and his environment.

The sophomores are now a vital part of NHHS; not only are they the largest class of new members, but they help to make up the largest student body in North Carolina. These sophomores are indeed proud to be a member of the school. Each strives as he becomes acquainted with the school and its responsibilities and functions, to help brighten the sunshine that the school contributes to students over a vast area.

All of these things are the sunshine and the shadows, the dark and the light, that are included in the first year at high school. The sophomore year is the beginning, and high school is the first appearance of the sun above the great and ever widening horizon of life.

The Senators head the Sophomore Class

Familiarizing themselves with the campus are the Sophomore senators: Patsy Hurst, Beverly Bailey, Emily Yopp, Janet Price, Martha Small, and Pat Beasley.

JUNIOR CLASS

Hopefully looking up the Senior Steps are the Junior Class Officers: Butch Lennon, president; Patsy Teachey, vice-president; and Sondra Wilson; secretary.

As every new junior now realizes, each high school year at NHHS is one of both sunshine and shadows. The first days as an upperclassman are filled with shadows—worries concerning classes, teachers, homework, tests—and most important of all—exams. The junior, like all members of the NHHS Student Body, is confronted with the trying task of maintaining an average grade.

Juniors have the happier, more sunshine-filled tasks, such as helping sophomores, presenting the Junior Class Play, and getting measured for class rings, which is indeed a monumental achievement. Each junior has seen the sunshine reflected on the faces of his upperclassmen, when they gained their class rings the year before and is anxious to receive his very own ring.

Football season begins the thrill of attending games and supporting the home team. The junior members are well adjusted to the games and give the cheers all of their school spirit.

The highlight of every junior's year is the Junior-Senior Prom. As he helps to raise funds or sponsor this occasion, his dreams of high school begin to be fulfilled.

The close of the year, with final exams, brings to every junior's heart and mind the thought that next year is it! Sunshine comes forth from every junior member as he realizes that next year he will be a senior with more privileges, responsibilities, and opportunities awaiting him. Each junior resolves that he will cast a helpful and an honest shadow behind him on NHHS and will meet the Senior sunlight with happiness and determination.

Senators are a vital part of every class organization.

Getting measured for rings are Junior Senators: Mac Williams, Ann Stokley, Barbara Singletary, Marty Allegood, Pam Chason, and Nancy Bradshaw.

Jane Malpass, Dewey Ann Weeks, Bobbie Green, Carol Booth, and James Cotton, Senior Class Senators, adorn the stair towers on a bright fall morning.

SENIOR CLASS

Secretary Rose Potter, and Vice-President Elliot Free stand on the senior steps looking over the campus.

With the year 1959-'60 completed, the class of '60 now find many incidents hazy in their memories.

Only three years ago this class was typical of many sophomore classes. Their lives were brightened by dances, ballgames, and many other school activities. The first glimpse of gloom hit the class with the arrival of mid-term exams, assuring the sophomore of his part in the student body.

An exciting junior year descended upon these students, mingled with sunshine and shadows. Attending the Junior-Senior Prom, receiving class rings, presenting the class play, as well as other activities, will be labeled unforgettable in the lives of this class.

At last the once awkward sophomore becomes a senior and the recipient of many privileges. Meeting friends on the Senior steps, cheering wildly at the ballgames as the leaders of NHHS, conducting assemblies, taking an active part in Government Day, preparing the trying research theme help to comprise their overflowing activities.

Now the '60 class can look at many experiences, which were once depressing, with smiles. The oral book report which was not well prepared, the day the government quiz was failed, and other events are now happily gazed upon. Of course, this class, like every class, had certain incidents which were bleak in the life of each student; but suddenly a beam of sunlight caught the shadow and life resumed its normal pattern.

Many students will move on to colleges and universities, while others will obtain various positions in the business world. Regardless of the path each person takes, the three glorious years at New Hanover High School will be deeply imprinted in their memories. Each day presented a different experience, entangled in a web of sunshine and shadows. After their three years at NHHS, these students are better prepared to cope with the future and all of its mystic adventures. Now prepared to lunge into life's pattern, each student goes into the future with eagerness. As each senior leaves the building by way of the Senior steps for the last time as a member of the '60 class, he cannot help but feel his heart swell with pride. Having now completed his high school education and readied himself for brighter horizons in a world of newly awakening opportunities, each senior is now aware of the role played by sunshine and shadows in his life.

NEW HANOVER HIGH SCHOOL

Senior Superlatives

The Senior Class superlatives enjoy a sunny winter lunch period on the Senior Steps. Elected by the Senior Class, the superlatives are outstanding members of the class. Jane Grossnickle and Jerry Markatos, Most Intellectual, discuss mutual interest. Earl Cole and Libby Ryan, Most Athletic, seem to ponder over a current sports event. Seen chatting about the campus are the Friendliest girl and boy, Martha Lee Begor and James Cotton. Judy Pluta and Ronnie Staton, Most School Spirit, plan a school activity. Bobby King and Frances LeNeave, Best Looking, seem to be enjoying the campus view. The Best-All-Around boy and girl, characterizing the different phases of school life, are Lynda Sue Peterson and Tim Chappell.

"Now the day is over . . .

The last bell has rung, but the hours of work and fun have not ended for the students of New Hanover High. With evening will come that special event to which many have eagerly looked forward. It may be that game of games—the homecoming—when the students wrap up and dash off with the crowd to sit in the bleachers and cheer until voices are lost in the fog of the night. Spirits, elated by the importance of the hour, are not dampened even when the rain threatens to drench the ROTC sponsors being presented at the half. Students merely pull raincoats over their heads and watch the home team win a muddy victory.

night is drawing nigh."

But there are other activities, just as important as the games, which occur at night—the long-awaited dance which leaves many tired feet in its wake or that dress rehearsal that didn't exactly go as it should have. These are the shadows of New Hanover High—the moments of seriousness or excitement which conclude a school day. There are moments of studying or of putting the final touches on some important project, as well as attending some school function.

When these moments have passed, a darkened NHHS smiles past its lighted lamps into the silent shadows of the night.

Advertising

As the last rays of the sun dimly shine through the windows of stores and shops all over the city and signify the close of another day, the students rush hurriedly about in the last minute purchase of articles. Then the buildings grow dim, the night lights begin their vigil, and the last package-laden shopper hurries homeward.

Tomorrow will see another day filled with the hustling and bustling of shoppers. The faces and wishes will differ, but the courtesy extended one and all by the respective managements will remain unchanged. The watchword of business is service; out of service arises continued good relations between consumer and businessman. Thus from this courtesy will be established good will among many people.

The friendliness and cooperation shown the staff of the 1960 HANOVERIAN by the businessmen in all relations cannot be overshadowed. In appreciation of this courtesy, students, faculty, and administration of New Hanover High School wish to extend a sincere vote of thanks to the following businesses, whose advertisements made publication of this book possible.

A Note of Thanks . . .

There are many factors that go into the making of a yearbook, but the people behind the book are those who make it a good presentation of the school. We, of the Hanoverian Staff, now thank those people who have contributed to this publication.

For remembering all the rules of making a yearbook at one time, for keeping the staff members going all the time but permitting necessary allowances, and for the unselfish guidance for this book, we thank Mr. Thomas McCall, our head advisor.

There could not be a Hanoverian without money coming in and going out at the same rate. To Mrs. Maurice Durham, we say thank-you for keeping a constant eye on the finances.

To Mrs. Joy Yarnall, we send a special thanks for stepping in this year with new ideas and the will to co-ordinate a most confusing part of our publication.

We say thank-you to Mr. C. D. Gurganus for keeping the picture schedules running smoothly and for squeezing those "must" pictures into the budget. We appreciate the interest that you have shown and expressed in our publication.

The Hanoverian thrives on the support of the students and faculty. We thank those people who have supported us in the participation of the subscriptions for book sections, in the individual subscriptions, and in the publicity that has been given the annual.

There are other important jobs for the publication that are rarely recognized by everyone. We thank the homeroom teachers for their cooperation with the pictures and for identifying the "lost" students. We know that this task can be worrysome and overbearing, and we sincerely appreciate their helping hand.

Our appreciation is also extended to the individual classroom teachers who have understood our deadline schedules and have helped us to spend extra time meeting them. We know that it is really a headache to repeatedly excuse us from class time or work at certain special times, and we thank you as much as possible; for we know that the publication could not have come out without your cooperation.

To the merchants, businessmen, and individual people of Wilmington, we say thank-you for showing your interest in our school and helping to publish this 1959-60 annual. For advertising in our Hanoverian we cannot show our appreciation enough, for it is people like you that help the students to have projects and develop ideas for themselves.

On the Hanoverian Staff are many students who have spent one, two, or three years working to the best of their ability to perfect an ideal in the presentation of a yearbook. These students we thank for spending long hours on writing copy, for creating past events on paper, and for making the Hanoverian a true picture of NHHS.

We thank Martha Lee and Sandra, Susan, and Lennie for expressing the life of our school in the club and organization pictures. These were the students that one could see every morning arranging a picture set, asking for names, or running around in circles trying to find the purpose of the Aviation Club, or the Secretary-Treasurer of the Radio Club, or where in the world to make the FBLA picture.

Jane and Catharine and Ann were the students looking at the building in odd angles, trying to find those shadows, or sitting in English concentrating on a new way to present the spirit of the school. We thank the girls for their willing effort and their unequalled products.

Eddie, Jane, and Becky, we thank for chasing around the gym to find who was that boy throwing the ball, or when could the Golf Team assemble for its pictures. How these members identified those mass action shots we would like to know.

The most important purpose of the Hanoverian is to picture the students—but 2300! We sympathize with the class editors, and we cannot thank Yvonne and Carolyn enough for making sure that each senior had his activities published and his positions included. We would also like to express our appreciation to Allen, Mary, and Judy for getting Betty's name with Betty's picture and for arranging that endless list of names with the Adamses first and the Zimmermans last.

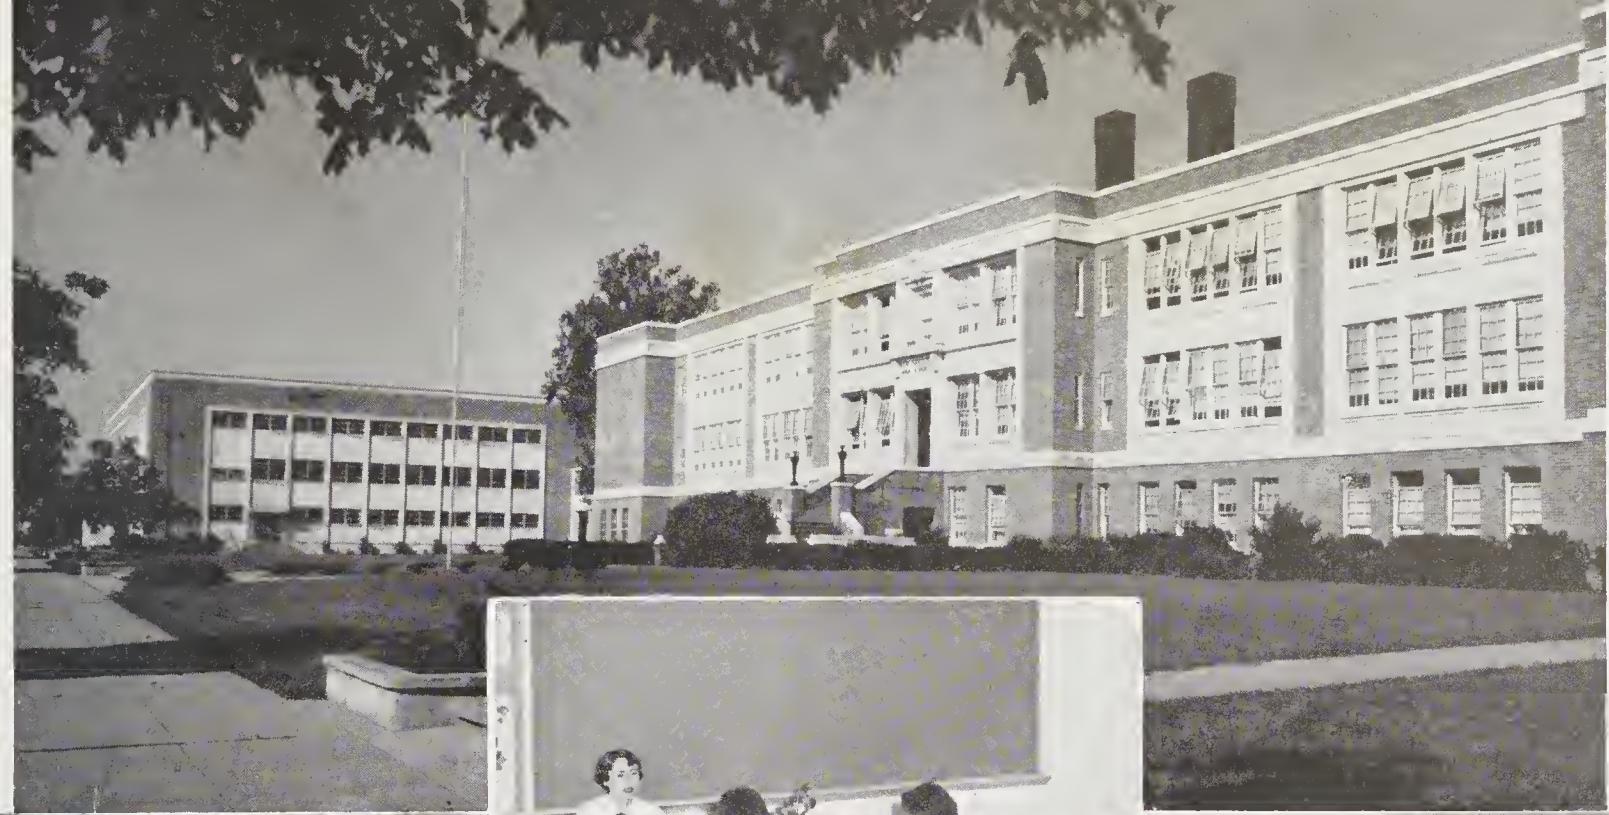

We can only say thank-you to Roger and Jerry, but we would like to say more for their constant work on the advertisement and business part of our book. Sometimes we could not understand why they fussed so much just because we did not have our subscription books ready, but we thank them for reminding us with that careful hint, "Bring that book!"

To James goes the award for "Best Arranger." We thank him for somehow getting the sponsors, the cadets, the officers, the leaders, and the photographer all together at the same time.

We especially send notes of appreciation to those students who helped sell the Hanoverians. To Billy, Ed, Tricia, Mary Lou, Martha Lee, Phyllis, and Tony we say thank-you so much for really using that sales talk.

A yearbook can only be as good as the work that all members connected with it contribute. We thank all of the people who have made this, the 1960 Hanoverian, a book of true memories for everyone.
